HOTEL ENGINE FORCE JOINS THE STRIKERS

Ovation for 16 Netherland Men When They Appear at Carnegie Hall Mass Meeting.

MRS. STOKES THEIR HERALD

Women Guests in Mineola Hotel Serve Dinner After the Waiters Quit.

Carnegie Hall was packed last evening by a mass meeting held for the striking hotel workers under the auspices of the Socialist Party. When the speaking began the auditorium could hardly have held another person, and two thousand were turned away at the doors. The meeting was designed not only as a demonstration of the socialist sympathies with the walters, but of the strength of the walters' union, and an answer to all who have said that the strike was on the wane.

Enthusiasm was at a high pitch all evening and reached its highest when Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes, after a few whispered words with Union Leader Edward Blochlinger, stepped to the very front of the platform and, holding up her hand in a gesture of triumph, cried out:

"My friends, the electricians, engineers, and firemen of the Hotel Netherland have just gone out. The lights have gone out, too, and they have left the hotel in darkness. This is the beginning of our answer to the charge that the back of the strike is broken. It is only the beginning, for they will all be doing it before long."

A few moments later sixteen men from the engine room of the Netherland entered the hall. The signal was given from the stage. There was a mighty roar of applause, and to this accompaniment the new recruits to the strike marched down the centre aisle and were boosted to seats of honor on the platform with Mrs. Stokes, Morris Hillquit, and the leaders of the strike.

It was learned later from Manager Sweet of the Netherland that at 9 o'clock sixteen men, firemen, assistant engineers, oilers, and a plumber, had walked out of his engine room without any further warning than the unsuccessful effort of the union leaders that afternoon to confer with him. He said that he had lost no electricians, that the hotel was not in darkness for so much as a second, and that the vacancies had been promptly filled by loans from Mr. Boldt of the Waldorf and Mr. Sterry of the Plaza. He said that his guests did not even know that anything had happened. This was the first walkout from the mechanics' field in the hotel world.

The men who went on strike are members of the International Hotel Workers' Union, itself, organized in the "Mechanics' Branch." Joseph Eltser, business agent of the union, in his speech in Carnegie Hall, said that there would be more medicine of this sort for the hotel proprietors, and announced that the strike would be extended to the seashore resorts in the height of the Summer business and to the stewards' department of the coast, Sound, and Hudson steamers. Mr. Eister also promised that certain golf clubs where men of millions play would feel the inconvenience of being waiterless.

Morris Hillquit made a stirring speech on the shame of the tip, which he described as an influence at once baneful, degrading, and humiliating. He said that it put the waiter in the position of the organ grinder snatching for pennies. His sentiments were received with a deep quiet by the waiters assembled. This is a sore point with them, for their early leaders made so much of the anti-tipping feature that they felt a painful contraction in their receipts and expressed their displeasure by ousting those leaders.

Mrs. Stokes made an extended speech on the double ethical standard for the laborers and the employers. She spoke of the men going out to fight for their country and killing the enemy on the field of battle; she spoke of men striking out in the fight to protect their class, themselves, and their family, and "sometimes, as at Los Angeles, unwittingly causing the death of human beings."

The other speakers were Adolph Germer of the United Mine Workers of America, and Joshua Wauhope, associate editor of The Call. Edward F. Cassidy presided. The "capitalistic press" was roundly denounced for its reports of the waiters' strike."

The only other Manhattan night walkout was at Healy's Restaurant, Columbus Avenue and Sixty-eighth Street, where the whistle was blown at 8 o'clock. This caused a profound stir in the kitchen, where, according to the management, eight of the help departed, but the waiters stuck to their tables. The union bulletin at Carnegie Hall had it that Healy's had lost forty-two. So do the accounts diverge.

One walkout that was on the schedule for last evening missed fire. This was the signal to the staff of the Hotel Hargrave, 112 West Seventy-second Street. The signal was the appearance in the dining room of a man who frantically waved a napkin. The startled guests heard the head waiter assure this intruder that the waiters would stick. They stuck, and it was learned afterward that the management had granted all demands except the recognition of the union.

Two hundred guests, many of them visitors to the dog show, were waiting hungrily in the dining room of the Andrews Hotel in Mineola, L. I., last evening, when Manager Kaiser announced apologetically that his eight waiters and two cooks had gone on strike and that he could not possibly serve them, for all efforts to raise strikebreakers in Mineola at a minute's notice had proved futile.

The guests flatly declined to go. Three or four of the women among them vowed that they would simply love to go into the kitchen and break the strike to the extent of preparing sandwiches enough for everybody. There was a round of applause. A dozen other women promptly offered their services as waitresses and the dinner was a huge success.

The threat of the union leaders that the downtown luncheon districts would be crippled by walkouts was little nearer fulfillment yesterday than it was on Monday when Haan's and Mouquins were afflicted by the strike. Yesterday Whyte's Restaurant was a victim, but it survived the blow and the patrons had no occasion to betake themselves to lunch counters. Sixty answered to the call of the union, but with the exception of four waiters and two cooks, these were all minor employes.

The brokers in the Stock Exchange club continued to enjoy their buffet lunch hugely. It took only ten or a dozen employes, including the chef, to put the dishes within reach. Robert L. Niles, a Stock Exchange member, who starts for Europe to-day, was to have been the guest of honor at a luncheon at the club yesterday, but owing to the strike the original plans were abandoned. Instead Mr. Niles was presented with an apron, cap and napkin, and was bid to wait on his brother members. He donned the regalia with a flourish and made the success of his career.

Although the hotel men continued yesterday to express themselves as convinced of the failure of the strike, they do not pretend to say that the trouble is all over, that their hotels are restored to perfect routine, or that they are not at all embarrassed by the operations of the union. The fact that the Executive Committee of thirteen, the emergency body created to deal with the strike, met behind closed doors yesterday afternoon, as it has every afternoon since the strike began, was proof enough that the hotel men do not feel that they are entirely out of the woods.

TRANS-OCEAN WIRELESS SITE

Marconi Co. Buys 600 Acres Near Asbury Park for $140,000.

Special to The New York Times.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 5.—The Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America signed articles of sale yesterday, whereby it will acquire more than 600 acres of farm land at the head of Shark River, west of here, as a station.

Four homesteads comprise the acreage. They were those of Charles Lewis, H. C. Hance, George P. Woolley, and William L. Robinson. It is reported that they brought $140,000. It is understood here that the company purposes establishing its chief American station here. The farms are located about four miles from the shore.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, June 5.—If present plans of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America succeed wireless communication between the New Jersey coast and London will soon be accomplished. Ex-Gov. Griggs, President of the company, said here to-day that the option obtained on 600 acres of ground at Shark River was for the purpose of erecting a station. He added that Marconi had now perfected the sending of messages from 3,000 to 6,000 miles, regardless of climatic conditions, and the possibilities of the system had been fully demonstrated.

The American Marconi Co. announced recently, when it arranged to take over the United Wireless Co., that it would establish a station in or near New York to operate directly with a station in England. The English Marconi Company has already begun work on a world-wide system by agreeing to establish for the British Government long distance land stations in South Africa, India, and other parts of the British Empire.

It is planned also to erect a long distance land station at some point on the Pacific Coast, probably in Washington, and through similar stations in the Hawaiian Islands, the Philippines and Japan place this continent in wireless communication with Asia.

A 9-CENT WEDDING RING.

It Was Used at a Brooklyn Marriage, Which Court Refuses to Annul.

Nine cents was paid for the wedding ring used at the marriage of William A. Reynolds to Miss Mary Kilkenny in April, 1905, according to testimony given yesterday in the trial of a suit for annulment of the marriage brought before Justice Kelby in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn. Reynolds was the plaintiff. He says he was forced into the marriage by his sisters, brothers, and relatives of his wife.

Reynolds returned home from work on the night of his unwilling marriage and found his wife, her brother and sister, and his own family there, all ready for the ceremony except himself. He said he did not know then that he was going to be married. His sister threatened to throw acid in his eyes, he asserted, if he did not marry the girl she wanted him to marry, and two brothers were waiting in an adjoining room ready to give him a severe beating if he persisted in remaining single. While he was fretting and objecting, his irate sister grabbed him by the nape of his neck and led him off to the home of Pastor Burnard, known then as the marrying parson. To make sure that there would be no hitch in the wedding, his sister gave 10 cents to a friend and sent her out to buy a ring.

Mrs. Mary Kirke of 215 Ninety-second Street testified that she bought the ring that night and paid 9 cents for it in a 3 and 9 cent store.

After listening to the testimony Justice Kelby said that the case did not appeal to him, the minister who performed the ceremony and the sister whom the plaintiff said did all the bossing having since died, and he refused to grant the annulment decree applied for by Reynolds.

TITANIC SURVIVOR HURT.

W. E. Carter, Thrown in Bryn Mawr Polo Game, Lands on His Head.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., June 5.—William E. Carter, who pulled an oar in Ismay's boat in the escape from the Titanic disaster, had a narrow escape from death to-day on the polo field at Bryn Mawr. He is now in the Bryn Mawr Hospital swathed in bandages, suffering from shock and possibly concussion of the brain.

Mr. Carter was playing in the forward position of the Bryn Mawr benedict team in the match with the Philadelphia Country Club quartet for the Goughacres Cup presented by Mrs. B. Frank Clyde. His skillful riding off in the first three periods of the game was one of the features of the play. After three minutes had expired of the fourth period, Mr. Carter made a desperate effort to ride E. Lowber Stokes off the ball. He turned his pony too quickly. The little thoroughbred's forelegs buckled and both rider and pony went down.

Mr. Carter landed on his shoulder and the side of his head. The pony rolled completely over him, regained its feet, and galloped off to the paddock. The members of both teams quickly dismounted ana rushed to Mr. Carter's assistance. Three physicians worked over him for twenty minutes, and at the first sign of regaining consciousness he was hurried to the hospital. No bones were broken.

JUDGE UPHOLDS KILLING.

Man Is Justified in Murdering Destroyer of His Home, He Says.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Judge Alexander Mullowney, who presides over Washington's very busy police court, handed down an obiter dictum to-day that astonished all who heard him. A negro was before him charged with assault with intent to kill. The Judge ordered the man released and dismissed the charge against him.

"A man who finds his wife in another man's company under certain circumstances," said the Judge, "is justified in doing murder."

"Judge, you don't mean to make that statement from the bench," said District Attorney Ralph Given, jumping to his feet. "You mean that the jury would and does in most cases exonerate a man, who, under these circumstances, commits murder."

"I mean exactly what I said," replied Judge Mullowney. "A man under those circumstances is not responsible and will be exonerated in this court."

GUARANTEE OFFERED BY LONDON STRIKERS

IS A LABOR INNOVATION

Sensation Caused In Parliament When It Is Announced — Dock Strike Likely to End Soon.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Thursday, June 6.—Developments yesterday indicate the imminent end of the strike of London transport workers.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George announced in the House of Commons last night that the National Transport Workers' Federation had passed a resolution agreeing to give monetary guarantees for the observation of any agreement made by the men.

J. Ramsay Macdonald, speaking for the transport workers, said he was authorized to say that if the Government could guarantee that the dispute was going to be straightened out without unreasonable delay then the men would be asked to go back to work at once.

The TIMES, commenting on this new departure on the part of the transport workers, says:

"We have never before had the very faintest intimation of a readiness to give substantial guarantees for the fulfillment of engagements by trade unions, nor has such a thing ever before been suggested by the Government. The principle has been accepted by both the transport workers and the Government that there must be no faltering with priniciple, that there must be neither hesitation or delay in working out a just and practical mode of application.

"The matter is one of National importance. It far transcends all the party contests upon which the time and energy of the House of Commons are so unprofitably expended.

"Let no one suppose that the working out of the principles is an easy affair, to be hurriedly disposed of in spare moments. It is, on the contrary, a matter calling for most serious treatment by the best brains that the nation can offer and for all the energy and determination that the Cabinet can muster."

LONDON, June 5.—The announcement of the offer by the Transport Workers' Federation created a sensation when it was announced in Parliament. The ship owners and other Port of London authorities will hold a meeting to-morrow to discuss the new situation which has thus arisen.

Another decision which helped to relax the tension was that of the strikers to abandon their demand for recognition of the federation ticket altogether. The disputants are now considered nearer to an agreement than at any time during the strike.

Mr. Lloyd-George in discussing the dock strike in the House of Commons to-day advocated a joint conciliation board, composed of representatives of the employers and the employes, which had already been suggested by the strikers, and he expressed the belief that if moderation were shown on both sides there would be no difficulty in reaching a settlement.

On a motion to adjourn, the question of the strike was again brought up in the House to-night by James O'Grady, Labor member for East Leeds. He urged the government to do something to end the struggle and denounced the employers for breaking their agreements.

Mr. Lloyd-George said that Sir Edward Clarke's report showed that both sides were to blame, but he did not think it was the business of the Government to stand aside and let the parties fight it out. He thought it most desirable that the employrrs should form a combination strong enough to control all the employes to adhere to their agreements. The Transport Workers' Federation had, he added, agreed to the principle of a joint board, with monetary guarantees from the two sides to insure the carrying out of agreements. For the first time the owners had a substantial guarantee that, where a bargain was entered into by the men, it would be carried out.

The men, said the Chancellor, were entitled to ask the same guarantee from the masters.

Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition, regarded the establishment of a joint board as most desirable, but said that in the meantime it was the clear duty of the Government to guarantee protection to all men desiring to work. He taunted the Ministers with being afraid to do anything by which they might risk losing the labor vote.

Ernest Bohn, Secretary of the Central Federated Union, which includes more than 900 trade organizations in Greater New York, stated to a NEW YORK TIMES reporter last night, in reference to the guarantee question raised by the London strikers, that he personally approved of their action.

"Such a move," he said, "is an innovation in England and it certainly would be an innovation here. For a labor organization to guarantee the carrying out of any agreement by bonding itself or its affiliations is a great step in the right direction."

LOST WIFE IN CENTRAL PARK.

Milwaukee Visitor, Fearing Harm to Her, Asked Police to Search.

Frank M. Davis, a manufacturer of gas engines of Milwaukee, visited Police Headquarters last night, and asked that an alarm be sent out for his wife. He said she was to have met him in front of the Arsenal in Central Park between 6 and 7 o'clock, but did not do so. She is a stranger to the city, and Mr. Davis was nearly frantic with fear that something had happened to her.

She wore a white linen suit, a yellow straw hat with a black velvet band and carried a heavy gray ulster. She is 43 years old and about five feet four inches in height.

NEXT SUNDAY'S TIMES

HIGHEST JUMP EVER IS MADE BY HORINE

IS NOT AN OFFICIAL RECORD

Because It Was Made In Practice—But the Feat Augurs Well for Our Part in the Olympic Games.

George Horine, the Stanford University high jumper who apparently will be America's chief reliance in his event at the Olympic Games, walked slowly toward the bar at Travers Island yesterday, took the two or three quick preliminary steps in the style which his success has made famous, and then rose into the air with a mighty bound to drop cleanly to earth the opposite side of a bar raised exactly six feet eight nad a quarter inches in the air. His leap was an inch and a quarter higher than his own best previous mark, and is higher than any other man in the world has ever jumped unaided.

Horine's great leap will not go down on the records, though it was accurately measured with a steel tape by Simon P. Gillies and C. C. Childs, the former Yale athlete. But it was made simply for practice and not in contest and will not be counted, therefore, so far as official records go, because of the absence of the regulations which must govern all trials for records. It was, nevertheless, the greatest unaided leap for height a human being ever made.

Six feet seven inches was considered sensational for a high jump when Horine made it at the Pacific Olympic tryouts several weeks ago, and he was hailed as a wonderful jumper whom every man interested in athletes watched eagerly when he arrived here last Thursday. His first appearance was at the New York Athletic Club games last Saturday, and then he was content with a modest jump of six feet four inches. The following day he did six feet three and three-quarter inches, both feats wonderful because following so closely his long journey across the continent.

Horine was certain, however, that he could equal his Pacific record and yesterday he set out to do so. With Messrs. Gillies and Childs on hand to witness and measure his jumps, Horine set the cross bar at five feet ten inches, a point where most jumpers finish.

He cleared the bar easily at this height and then had the cross bar moved up immediately to six feet three inches, though in striving for such a height another jumper than Horine would have moved slowly upward an inch, perhaps, at a time. Horine rose over the bar at this height, however, as easily as he had on his first jump and immediately had it moved up to six feet six inches.

Then, for the first time, he faltered, and his arm brought the bar down behind him. He repeated the attempt at this height and cleared the stick easily on this venture. Then it was that the bar was moved up to the notches that mark six feet nine inches on the supporting posts.

Horine approached this record jump as he approaches all of his leaps, not with a long run but with rather a slow walk until quite near the bar, when a few quick steps seem to give him all the momentum and all the gathering of energy that he needs to make the leap. He rose straight upward, his body lying out parallel with the ground so that it seemed that his arms and body actually preceded his legs over the bar, and then he dropped to the other side without a semblance of touching the lightly balanced cross stick. The tape was placed on it immediately and the record figure of 6 feet 8¼ inches was announced by the elated watchers, the difference being accounted for by the sag in the centre of the cross piece.

Horine will accompany the Olympic team to Stockholm, and as he has demonstrated that a change of scene and climate does not affect him the high jump event at least looks safe for America.

Horine will perform publicly once more before the trip to Stockholm is made, as he is entered in the Olympic "tryout" meet at Cambridge on Saturday.

Looking backward at the intercollegiate championships of 1877 it is found that the running high jump was won at a height of 4 feet 11 inches, while the pole vault honors on the same occasion were taken by a student who soared to the then great height of 7 feet 4 inches. It was not until 1891 that 6 feet was cleared by a man in these sports, although W. Byrd Page of the University of Pennsylvania, who was the greatest jumper in the world during the period between 1885 and 1887, with a record of 6 feet 4 inches, was a contestant at the intercollegiate games.

Although America has had for twenty years past the greatest high jumpers in the world, it remained for M. F. Sweeney of the New York Athletic Club to place to his credit the mark of 6 feet 5⅝ inches at the International games at Manhattan Field in 1895, which mark stood until displaced by Horine about six weeks ago, when he did 6 feet 6¼ inches.

Horine has a style totally different from all the athletes who have essayed prominence at this game. He approaches the bar with little or no speed, coming up from the side and making his leap when closer to the bar, probably, than any man who has ever jumped.

He gets a wonderful height with a great leg throw which warrants his legs being higher than his body when directly over the crossbar. Taking off with his left leg, he gets a layout over the bar, which warrants his saving any possible chance of hitting the stick with his hip, a phase of the game which has nullified great leaps by most of our jumpers.

When directly over the cross piece, he rolls over from his horizontal position, and inclines to fall toward the stick, with the left arm the nearest portion of his body to the bar. In other words, he simply reverses the common style, having little or no chance of taking the stick down with anything other than his arm, which glides down beyond the stick on his descent.

SENATOR NIXON DIES, NO DOCTORS WITH HIM

ON HER WAY FROM NEVADA

Senator Underwent Operation at Washington Hospital for Abscess —Unconscious Since Monday.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Senator Nixon of Nevada died at 10 o'clock to-night at the Episcopal Eye, Ear, and Throat Hospital. The Senator had been ill for a long time suffering from an abscess in the nose. But only on Thursday last did he consent to an operation. Following the operation cerebro spinal meningitis developed, and two days ago Mr. Nixon sank into unconsciousness. He never rallied.

Believing that Christian Science could do more than medical science toward saving her husband, Mrs. Nixon telegraphed on Monday the discharge of Dr. Harvey Cushing, foremost meningitis specialist of nerve diseases in this country, and ordered the substitution of the services of William S. Campbell, the best-known Christian Scientist in Washington.

This fact became known this afternoon when it was learned that Dr. Cushing, who was at the operation, performed last Thursday, had not been at the Senator's bedside since Monday. Inquiries brought forth the fact that not only had the case been taken from the hands of the Baltimore specialists, but that the other surgeons and specialists had been notified that they were no longer needed.

Mrs. Nixon, on whose request the change was made, is a Christian Scientist. She is now speeding toward Washington with her son, Bertram. The telegram which dispensed with the services of the specialists came Monday, and was addressed to Dwight Jones, private secretary of the Senator. This was after Mr. Jones had conferred with Dr. Cushing, and the latter had told him the case was hopeless.

"I said nothing about the change in physicians before, because I was so requested by Mr. Campbell," Mr. Jones said this afternoon. "Now, since the matter has been made public, I will explain my attitude regarding it.

"The physicians in charge of the case gave it up as hopeless. On Monday morning Dr. Cushing said that he had done all in his power to relieve the Senator's sufferings, but without avail. Mrs. Nixon was notified. She asked that the treatment he changed, and that a Christian Science treatment be administered. I studied over the proposition, and immediately called on some representatives of that faith here in Washington. It was nothing but right that the Scientists should be given a chance."

Mrs. Nixon is not expected to reach Washington till Saturday morning.

United States Senator George S. Nixon of Nevada was born on a farm in Placer County, Cal., fifty-two years ago. Farmer boy, telegraph operator, railroad agent, banker, mine owner and rancher were the successive steps in his career. His parents, John H. and Mary A. Estill Nixon, came from Winchester County, Tenn. He entered the employ of the Southern Pacific when he was nineteen years old, and studied telegraphy. After four years he took a position with the Carson & Colorado Railroad for a year, after which a President of the First National Bank of Reno, a personal friend, offered him a position in the bank.

He held this place for two years and then helped to organize the First National Bank of Winnemucca, of which he was cashier and manager until 1901, when he was elected President. He quickly identified himself with land reclaiming and ranching companies, and also with the mining interests of Goldfield, Tonopah, and other camps. He was a member of the Nevada State Legislature in 1891, and quickly forced his way to the front as a political leader. He was elected to the United States Senate in 1905, to succeed William M. Stewart. He became Chairman of the Senate's National Banks (select) Committee, and also of the Committees on Coast Defenses, Irrigation, Mines, Transportation, and others.

He was a Mason, a member of Knights of Pythias, and the Elks. He married Miss Kate I. Bacon, of Princeton, Ill., in 1887, and has one son.

Few men in this country have had a more adventurous career than Senator Nixon.

"I was talking to a friend in the private office of my bank in Winnemucca, in September, 1900," Senator Nixon once remarked. "Suddenly the door burst open with a crash and a wild looking man with a six-shooter leaped into the room and told us to hold up our hands. He walked us out into the lobby of the bank where two other men were holding the rest of the bank employes up with rifles. The wild looking man ordered me to open the safe, and when I made some excuse drew a knife and pressed it against my throat. I opened the safe in a hurry. They took $30,000 in gold out of our safes, and lining us up in the street, jumped on their horses and dashed away, shooting their rifles and pistols in the air. Although pursued by a deputy sheriff on a switch engine, they had the nerve to stop at my house, three miles out of town, to get fresh horses. The same gang robbed an express car in Montana of $40,000 in unsigned national bank notes a year later, and one of them was almost caught trying to pass one of the unsigned bills in a Nashville, Tenn., store, but escaped after more gun play."

WORTH A MILLION NOW.

Princess Engalitcheff's Father Adds to Her Wealth by Building Gift.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 5.—Princess Engalitcheff of Chicago and of the Russian nobility is now declared to be worth a million in her own right, her wealth having reached that sum by a gift she received to-day. It was a one-fourth interest in the Schiller Building, on Randolph Street, including the Garrick Theatre.

When it was announced the other day that Prince and Princess Engalitcheff would leave Chicago and make their home in Paris, Charles W. Partridge, father of the Princess, looked through his warranty deeds and other effects to find a souvenir for his daughter, and decided upon giving her an interest in the Schiller Building. So a deed was filed presenting the building to Mr. Partridge's four children, each getting a fourth interest. It cost Mr. Partridge $450,000 a year ago for the property, which is said to have increased in value since to about $800,000.

Two years ago Mr. Partridge conveyed to his children the Reliance Building for which he paid $700,000. The children have also received from him many other gifts in realty and money.

EVEN MONEY AGAINST T. R.

Wall Street, However, Classes This Wager as a Shadow Bet.

Since the anti-betting laws went into effect, little real money has found its way into Wall Street to be placed on election wagers. This year various wagers on Col. Roosevelt's chances, both for the nomination and for election, have been talked of, but outside of bets in two and three figures between individuals, not much real money has been placed.

Yesterday another was added to the list of what have come to be called "shadow bets." A Curb broker permitted it to become known that he had placed $2,000 even against Roosevelt's nomination by the Republican National Convention, and said that he was offering $1,000 even that the Colonel would be elected if nominated. He also was offering $1,200, he said, that President Taft would be defeated if nominated for re-election.

This broker feared that the publication of his name might bring him into trouble with the authorities, but the tale brought him plenty of publicity as privately circulated on the Curb.

LUDICROUS, SAYS COLONEL.

This of Report That Wall Street Was Raising $1,500,000 for Him.

A report has been current in Wall Street for several days to the effect that financial interests hostile to President Taft stood ready to provide a fund of $1,500,000 to advance the cause of Col. Roosevelt for the Republican nomination and that a similar amount would be used to finance a third party ticket with Roosevelt at its head should the Chicago Convention refuse to nominate him.

Gossip adds that President Taft's anti-trust policies have driven to the side of Col. Roosevelt a number of men who have been hitherto bitterly opposed to him. They believe, it is alleged, that Col. Roosevelt would be less dangerous to "Big Business."

When Col. Roosevelt was questioned last night at Oyster Bay concerning the reported campaign fund, he professed to be highly amused.

"The report is too ludicrous to be discussed," said he. "It is stuff and nonsense of the most tawdry description."

PRINCE JAIME OPERATED ON.

Second Son of King Alfonso Again Needs Surgeons' Services.

MADRID, June 5.—Prince Jaime o. Spain, the second son of King Alfonso and Queen Victoria, was operated on to-day for abscess of the ear.

The operation was performed by Prof. Moore of Bordeaux.

Prince Jaime, who is about four years of age, has been operated on several times for affections of the nose and throat. He has never been in robust health, and reports have been current that he was without the power of speech.

It was hoped that by an operation performed last August at Fribourg a permanent cure would be effected.

AFTER STOCK EXCHANGE, TOO

Money Trust Investigators Summon Its Secretary to Testify.

George W. Ely, Secretary of the Stock Exchange, has been subpoenaed as a witness in the Money Trust investigation which is to begin at the Custom House this morning. Mr. Ely will not be called, however, until next week. It is believed that other officials of the Exchange also will be called, after the inquiry into the Clearing House has been completed.

The plan is to call William Sherer, manager of the Clearing House, to-day, and A. Barton Hepburn, President of the association, will be questioned next week.

CUSUMANO SLAYER DIES.

Sentence of Wife of Mascioli's Victim Commuted to Life Term.

BOSTON, June 6.—Enrico Mascioli of Hull, who, with Mrs. Lena Cusumano, was convicted of the murder of the woman's husband, Frank Cusumano, was put to death by electricity at the State prison at Charlestown this morning.

The woman's sentence of death was commuted to life imprisonment by the Governor's council yesterday.

Mascioli was taken from the death cell to the execution room and placed in the electric chair a few minutes after midnight. The current was immediately applied and at 12:18 o'clock the physicians in attendance pronounced him dead.

GIVES FIRST AND LAST RITES.

Priest Administers Baptism and Extreme Unction to Dying Baby.

A truckman unhitched his horse in a vacant lot opposite the stable of John Armstrong, at 266 East 146th Street, yesterday, and the animal started across the street to its stall. As it emerged from the lot it struck nine-year-old Mary Monna, of 286 East 146th Street, who was carrying her two-months-old sister, Lucy, and both children were knocked down.

Neighbors picked them up and finding the baby unconscious called Dr. Mellon from Lincoln Hospital. The ambulance was ready to drive off when Mrs. Monna recalled that the infant had not been baptized. A neighbor ran to the Church of Our Lady of Pity, in 151st Street, and Father Anselm Lenzi returned with her.

While the mother, seated in the ambulance, held the child Father Lenzi baptized her. Dr. Mellon urged him to hurry, declaring that the baby could only live a few moments at most, and when the first ceremony was completed the priest immediately administered extreme unction to the baby.

The run to the hospital was made at full speed, but the baby died as she was carried into the operating room.

SENATOR REED IN THE AIR.

Missouri Statesman Goes on Flight with Aviator from the Navy.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 5.—Lieuts. Ellyson and Towers of the Navy Aviation School here this afternoon won a strong friend in Congress when Ellyson gave a trial flight and Towers took up United States Senator James A. Reed of Missouri in one of the Government hydro-aeroplanes.

After his flight Senator Reed expressed himself as pleased with the experience, and more than ever interested in the development of an aero corps for the Government. He said that he had not until now realized to what point the development of the science of flying had been carried.

The Senator came over from Washington for the purpose of inspecting the school and its equipment, and after witnessing a flight by Lieut. Ellyson boarded another of the Curtis hydro-aeroplanes and was taken up about 100 feet and out over the harbor, circling around the lighthouse about three miles out.

To-morrow afternoon demonstrations for the benefit of the visiting German officers will be part of the aviators' programme.

ROOT AS PERMANENT CHAIRMAN, THE PLAN

COMMITTEE MEETS TO-DAY

Administration Managers Grow More Confident as the Time for Hearing Contests Draws Near.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 5.—With the preliminary skirmish in the Republican contest over the Presidential nomination only a few hours off the leaders of the Taft forces, who have been gathering here in great numbers, to-night expressed the greatest confidence in the outcome. More and more the conviction is gaining ground among persons who may be assumed to possess inside information on the subject that President Taft is growing stronger as a candidate and Col. Roosevelt weaker as the hours go by.

A plan to meet at once the full force of Col. Roosevelt's fight to control the organization of the National Convention by making permanent the temporary organization with Senator Elihu Root as Chairman, was partly agreed upon to-day by Taft leaders, who are here for the opening session of the National Committee to-morrow.

Control of the committee by the Taft forces is said by them to be certain. When the committee meets at 2 o'clock to-morrow to organize for the hearing of contested delegate cases, the Roosevelt forces will not attempt either to seat R. B. Howell of Nebraska to succeed acting Chairman Rosewater, or to select a Roosevelt committeeman as presiding officer for the contest hearings.

Fresh from conference with Col. Roosevelt at Oyster Bay, Senator Dixon and National Committeeman William T. Ward of New York made it clear that the Roosevelt managers were not behind the claim of Mr. Howell to a seat on the committee. He will endeavor to present his own case, contending that his recent indorsement in the Nebraska primary entitled him to the place.

Senators Crane, Penrose, and Sanders, who arrived from Washington to-day, were kept busy canvassing the situation. The ultimatum from Col. Roosevelt that Senator Root must not be elected as Temporary Chairman, which was reiterated by Senator Dixon on his arrival in Chicago, was met by a strengthening of the Taft forces in opposition. The Taft leaders determined not only to adhere to their purpose to seat Senator Root, but to call upon their forces to help make him Permanent Chairman of the convention.

The Roosevelt campaign managers, who also have transferred their activities to this city, persisted to-day in their predictions that Col. Roosevelt would be nominated on the first ballot when the Republican National Convention meets. From neither side has there been forthcoming for publication any thorough analysis of the situation to bear out with convincing force the assertions of either. But all through the day there has been apparent in the Taft camp an air of cheerfulness and of rising hopes which seems far too real to be simulated.

With the convention almost a fortnight off the daily scenes in the hotel lobbies where delegates and politicians gather during a National convention, as well as at the Coliseum Annex, where the convention headquarters are located, have rivaled those which in other years were in evidence only on the very eve of the convention itself. Not only is almost the full membership of the Republican National Committee represented here to-night, but the advance guard of delegates and contestants, and leaders, who have no direct connection with the committee or the contests, have been flocking into the city throughout the day.

Real Fight Begins Friday.

To-night half a dozen conferences were in progress at which were being planned the various strategic moves to be made on what for the next two or three weeks will be a political battleground on which the eyes of the Nation will be riveted. All this early haste and hurry is due to a realization on the part of leaders that the real battle for the Presidential nomination will be fought, not on the floor of the convention, nor, as of old, in a council of bosses behind closed doors, but before the Republican National Committee at its hearings on contests which are scheduled to begin Friday.

With nearly all the members of the National Committee on the scene, the managers for both sides have had agents at work taking a poll with a view of determining their respective strength in that body.

The Taft managers have declared all along that as many as thirty-four of the fifty-three members would stand by the President and refuse to be carried away by the Roosevelt clamor or to be bulldozed into taking the Colonel's part. In the settlement of contests, Representative McKinley, President Taft's campaign manager, said to-night that he saw no reason for changing his estimate of the President's strength in the committee.

From the campaign managers for Col. Roosevelt there have come many hints recently that when the first vote on any question of vital importance in the pending conflict is taken in the National Committee, the hollowness of the Taft claim would appear.

Every development to-day indicated that the National Committee will remain firm, and that if Col. Roosevelt and his friends expect favors rather than even handed justice in the committee's decision on contests, they will be a sorely disappointed lot before many more hours have passed.

In the Roosevelt camp there was a sudden change of front to-day from the attitude of half suspicion with regard to the course of the National Committee which has been apparent from time to time in statements emanating from the Roosevelt headquarters here as well as from the Colonel himself in campaign speeches and other utterances.

Senator Dixon when he took charge of the Roosevelt headquarters here to-day discussed the National Committee in honeyed phrases, strangely at variance with the warlike utterances that have gone before. Senator Dixon was asked whether he thought the Colonel would be in a position to control sufficient votes on the committee to get a considerable number of his delegates seated.

"I consider all this talk about controlling votes on the National Committee as most undignified and unfortunate," replied the Senator. "We do not control any votes on the committee. We have not tried to control any. We are not going to make any attempt in that direction. The National Committee is composed of high-minded Republicans—who have the welfare of their party at heart. Many of the members have attested their loyalty to the Republican Party by years of faithful service on its governing body.

I certainly look to these genelemen to decide with absolute fairness all the contests that will come before them."

The meeting of the National Committee scheduled for to-morrow will be merely preliminary in its nature. Among the business to be transacted will be that of deciding whether R. B. Howell of Omaha shall be given immediate access to the seat now held by Acting Chairman Victor Rosewater of that city, as representative of Nebraska on the committee. Mr. Howell was elected a member of the National Committee at the direct primaries in Nebraska, and will be on hand when the committee meets to-morrow, unless he should change his mind overnight, to demand immediate admission on the strength of a certificate of election and a copy of his oath of office, both signed by the Secretary of State of Nebraska.

It is the general opinion here to-night that his request will be turned down and that the debate over the proposition will be exceedingly brief. Immediately afterward it is planned to elect Mr. Taft's friend Rosewater, Chairman of the committee for the unexpired term of Gov. Hill of Maine, who died some months ago. Mr. Rosewater's election, it was predicted to-night, would be by practically unanimous vote.

In connection with the claims that have been put forth by Mr. Howell and Thomas Niedringhaus of Missouri, whose election to succeed Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel to the National Committee it has been insisted should be made effective before the convention, it was stated to-day by Col. Harry S. New, Chairman of the National Committee Sub-Committee on Arrangements, that a report was being prepared by Secretary Hayward of the committee dealing with the historic status of the National Committee. This report, which probably will be adopted will, it was said to-night, utterly shatter the contention that any State can enact direct primaries or other rules binding on the National Committee.

The first real fight in the committee with a lineup indicative of the comparative strength of the Taft and Roosevelt men on the National Committee is likely to come at to-morrow's session when the committee will adopt rules to govern the hearings of contests. The Taft men are said to favor in the main the rules which were in vogue four years ago when Col. Roosevelt, then in the White House, ordered the steam roller put into operation to force the nomination of Mr. Taft.

The first of these rules provided for the hearing of all contests behind closed doors. This was eagerly seized upon by the Roosevelt men as an attractive issue which for a time, at least, might divert attention from the contests themselves. But since then President Taft has come out for open sessions and the committee is likely to comply with the President's recommendation at least in part.

Under the tentative plan to be proposed at the committee meeting to-morrow, provision has been made for the admission of a number of newspaper men to the hearings, with the proviso, however, that the vote on decisions of individual contests shall be taken in executive session.

Senator Dixon said to-night that the friends of Col. Roosevelt would insist that the vote be taken in open session, too. More than that, they will urge that the decisions shall be not by viva voce vote, as in other years, but that in every instance there shall be a roll call. Under the rules applied four years ago the demand must come from twenty members to be binding.

Former United States Special Deputy Attorney General Frank B. Kellogg, who represents Minnesota on the National Committee, it was said to-night, would be on the outlook for the Roosevelt interests at the meeting to-morrow. Senator Dixon, despite his strong commendation of the character of the committee members, apparently believes that the committee will bear watching from the beginning.

"We want everything to be in the open," said the Senator. "Yes, votes and all. And we will demand that the decisions be on roll call of all the members and not on viva voce vote as in other years. The public has a right to know what the committee does in connection with these contests at every stage of the proceedings."

Former United States Senator Dick of Ohio, who will have charge of the contest arguments for the Taft forces, has made most elaborate investigation of the circumstances under which the contesting Roosevelt delegations were selected. A friend of Senator Dick declared to-night that after the first one hundred contests or so have been heard there will be little left of the Roosevelt argument.

Under the rules of four years ago provision was made for bunching decisions to cover cases where contests are brought on identical or nearly identical grounds. The rule will probably apply again. It so happens that some of the first contests that will appear on the committee's calendar are from the Southern States, where it is declared the Colonel's contesting delegates were selected with no regard whatever to the regularity of the procedure from a party point of view. Regularity or lack of regularity has been one of the dominant factors with the committee in other Presidential years in determining whether delegates were entitled to their seats.

Director McKinley of the National Taft Bureau, acting on behalf of President Taft, to-day, in his official capacity requested the Republican National Committee to admit representatives of the press to all its proceedings leading up to the Republican National Convention. The request covers all hearings of contests and any other business which may come before the governing body of the Republican Party. Of course, the committee itself is the final tribunal by which all such requests must be decided.

The managers of the campaign of President Taft have consistently proceeded on the theory that the National Committee is the authoritative body of the party between conventions and that its decisions in all matters shall be final. In like manner the call of the Republican National Committee for the Republican National Convention has been strictly adhered to by the friends of the President in the contests for delegates in various States.

Knowing the desire of President Taft that there should be no secrecy in the conduct of the coming convention and that all candidates should be treated with the utmost fairness, Mr. McKinley made the following announcement to-night:

"On behalf of President Taft, I have asked the Republican National Committee, officially, to give full publicity to all its proceedings preliminary to the Republican National Convention."

In discussing the situation with a correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES to-night Director McKinley said that everything looked promising for the President, and that the situation was improving every hour. The prediction of Senator Dixon and other Roosevelt campaign managers that Col. Roosevelt would be nominated on the first ballot he denounced as absurd. He predicted that President Taft would have 600 votes on the first ballot.

"From to-morrow the situation will rest with the chosen representatives of the party on the National Committee," said Mr. McKinley. "The committee will settle all questions preliminary to the meeting of the convention and will settle them to the best interest of the party. We are perfectly content to abide by anything the committee does.

"Reports from every part of the country indicate a wavering in the Roosevelt strength generally. In my opinion this has been occasioned by a number of causes, chief among these the failure of the Southern delegates pledged to President Taft to break away as predicted by the Roosevelt managers."

A majority of the Republican National Committeemen are already on the scene prepared for work. Among those who arrived this morning were Col. Roosevelt's New York champion, William L. Ward, Jr. With him were some of his Westchester lieutenants and Charles H. Duell who is Chairman of the Roosevelt Committee in New York City. Former Congressman Lucius N. Littauer of New York is also on hand.

Mr. Ward was in conference with Senator Dixon during the day. Beyond declaring that Col. Roosevelt surely would be nominated he had no statement to make.

Nearly all the workers of the Taft bureaus in New York and Washington have now been transferred to the headquarters in this city. Among the arrivals this morning was John W. Hutchinson, director of the Eastern Taft headquarters. Col. Lafayette B. Gleason, Secretary of the Republican State Committee and Assistant Secretary of the National Committee, is also here.

Mr. Gleason said that in all likelihood William Barnes, Jr., would not be on hand until early next week.

"The situation is so good," said Col. Gleason, "that there really is no necessity for Mr. Barnes to come at this time."

PRESIDENT IS CONFIDENT.

Will Fight the Colonel to a Finish, His Friends Declare.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—President Taft's choice for permanent Chairman of the Republican National Convention is Senator Elihu Root of New York, already selected by the Republican National Committee as the temporary Chairman of that convention. In spite of the opposition of Col. Roosevelt and some of his advisers to Senator Root as temporary presiding officer of the convention, Mr. Taft to-day decided that Mr. Root also should receive his support for the Permanent Chairmanship.

The news that the President had reached this decision was taken to-night in Washington as a further indication that the President and his friends intend to fight Mr. Roosevelt at every point, and was said also to show that the President is confident that he has the votes necessary to insure the selection of the New York Senator in spite of determined opposition and to make permanent the temporary organization of the convention.

Politicians still in the capital were inclined to look with favor upon Mr. Root for the permanent office. They said that his selection would insure the occupancy of the chair by a man who could not be moved by the galleries and who could be counted upon to make his rulings in an impersonal way.

The information that the President would like to see Mr. Root made Permanent Chairman followed closely the departure of his secretary, C. D. Hilles, for Chicago. Mr. Hilles will have charge of the President's interests before the National Committee and the convention. He will be in constant communication with the White House. He will not interfere in any way with other leaders of the Taft forces now in Chicago, but will be a personal representative of his chief.

SHERMAN SURE IT'S TAFT.

Vice President Has No Doubt of His Renomination at Chicago.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Vice President Sherman at the White House declared to-day that he believed President Taft would be nominated by the Republican National Convention.

"I have not the slightest doubt about it," he said. "He will have at least 100 more delegates than Roosevelt. I would not like to name the exact figure, but that will be near Mr. Taft's majority. That is my real opinion, too, not a mere boast."

TAFT'S INDIANA REPLY.

Briefs Completed Answering Roosevelt's Charges of Irregularity.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 5.—Briefs have just been completed by Merrill Moores, counsel for the Taft delegates from Indiana to the National Convention and supported by numerous affidavits and circumstantial accounts of events in question, in reply to the Roosevelt contest briefs already filed from this State. Ex-Senator Dick of Ohio, who has charge for the Taft forces of all contests before the convention aided Mr. Moores in the preparation of his briefs.

In reply to the allegation that the Indiana State Convention Credentials Committee was unfair in seating a Taft delegation from the contested districts, the briefs prepared by Mr. Moores hold that a full hearing was had by the Credentials Committee.

The reply briefs also charge that the Roosevelt "rump" convention held immediately after the regular State Convention and in the back of the same hall was a farce, and that less than forty of the 1,440 delegates in the hall attended. As to the Roosevelt contention of turbulency in district conventions, the reply is:

"If turbulency is enough to disfranchise district conventions it is respectfully submitted that no quorum of delegates has ever been elected to any National Convention since the war."

ROOSEVELT IS SURE OF A SQUARE DEAL

Says So Himself, and Will Stay Away from Chicago Unless Needed to Wake Things Up.

Victory There Will Cause National Committeemen to Sit Up and Think —Private Wire in His Home.

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., June 5.—Unless there is absolute need for his presence there, Col. Roosevelt will not go to Chicago to direct his fight before the National Convention. His sweeping victory in South Dakota, he feels, will aid materially in bringing the National Committee to realize that he has a great majority of the Republican Party in the Northern and Western States with him in his fight, and that he must receive a "square deal."

If he does go to Chicago it will not be until the convention is about to open. Col. Roosevelt feels, it is said, that if he enters the fight personally at Chicago too soon he will throw away one of his strongest cards—the opportunity of sweeping down upon the Convention City at the eleventh hour if he finds that things are going against him and by a spectacular arrival turning the tide in his favor. When his attention was called to reports from Chicago that the Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Illinois delegation had said that he expected Roosevelt along any time, he remarked:

"That is their guess."

During the day he received many telegrams from his chief lieutenants, including Senator Dixon, Col. Cecil Lyon, Ormsby McHarg, and William L. Ward, who were scurrying about Chicago preparing for the caucus of the committees of Roosevelt delegates which will be held a week before the convention opens. He seemed to be greatly cheered by the news he received, and to feel that while reports which looked a bit gloomy for him were appearing in many of the newspapers he easily would be in command when the final struggle comes. He was urged today to make some comment on the National Committee situation, and replied:

"I am sure that I will be given a square deal."

He was next told that there were rumors that William Barnes, Jr., of New York would be at the session of the committee as the proxy of S. A. Perkins of the State of Washington. He smiled and said "Bully."

The Colonel also said that in the face of the overwhelming sentiment that had been shown for him and the principles he advocates by the voters in practically every State where primaries have been held, he believed that a number of the committeemen who are looked upon as adherents of President Taft would act fairly on contests. He has little hope of any quarter being given by men like Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, Murray Crane of Massachusetts, or Franklin Murphy of New Jersey, but he expressed the opinion that many others would refuse to be governed by the will of the "bosses." These men, he pointed out, will have to go back to their homes to live out their lives, and will think long before they defy the expressed wish of their constituents.

The fact that Col. Roosevelt has had a telegraph outfit installed at Sagamore Hill so that he can receive full reports of the early proceedings in Chicago by direct wire is considered confirmation of his reported intention to remain at home during the convention.

Col. Roosevelt's visitors to-day included Judge Leonard Hand, Norman Hapgood, J. F. Cotton, and George Rublee.

To-night, after receiving the latest reports from South Dakota, Col. Roosevelt said:

"I have made a complete sweep and would have done the same in every State if the people had been given a fair chance."

When asked to comment upon the report emanating from Chicago to the effect that the Taft forces were planning not only to insure the nomination of Senator Root as temporary chairman of the convention, but to bring about his election as permanent chairman as well, Col. Roosevelt professed to be much amused.

"There is no sense in it," he declared. "The permanent chairman is elected by the convention, and there is no one who, in advance of the convention, has any right to speak with authority on the subject."

COLBY ATTACKS TAFT.

Says He Connived at Frauds by Which Roosevelt Is Cheated.

Bainbridge Colby, the lawyer who is to appear before the Republican National Committee at Chicago to-day to argue in behalf of the Roosevelt delegates who have brought contests, issued a long statement from the Roosevelt committee headquarters in this city yesterday setting up the contention that in Washington, Kentucky, and Indiana the regularly chosen Roosevelt delegates were thrown out of the county conventions and Taft delegates to the State Conventions selected in their places. In Washington State, more than any other, says Mr. Colby, the will of the majority was thwarted.

"Mr. Taft cannot be ignorant of the facts," said Mr. Colby. "They have been published and are known even to the journals which have suppressed them. He is conniving at these frauds and seeking to profit by them, and he therefore cannot shirk his responsibility for them."

PREDICTS ROOSEVELT BOLT.

In Fact, Says Vardaman, the Colonel Already Has Done So.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 5.—"Taft is going to rob Roosevelt if he can," said United States Senator-elect Vardaman of Mississippi here to-night, "but Roosevelt will hold Taft up at the end of a gun and take it away from him if possible. Roosevelt, in effect, has already bolted, and I believe he will run as an independent if he is steam-rolled at Chicago.

"Up to about ten days ago I really believed that he would be nominated at Chicago. Now I do not know; the tide seems to be turning a little the other way. But it would be the most unfortunate thing in the history of the United States were Roosevelt to be re-elected. He is totally unprincipled. His method of getting out of predicaments is to call the other man a liar. He would call any man a liar provided he was far enough away. And when caught in deliberate falsehoods he hasn't even the grace to apologize."

There will be no dark horse at Baltimore, according to Mr. Vardaman, who is one of the Mississippi delegates-at-large. Just four men have a chance to win the Democratic nomination there he said. They are Underwood, Wilson, Clark, and Harmon.

"In fact, I might say three, leaving off Harmon," he added. "Of them, I believe Underwood is the hope of the party."

Mr. Vardaman wants the Democrats to declare for the initiative, referendum, and recall.

SOUTH DAKOTA IS COLONEL'S

Plurality for Roosevelt Delegates Is Estimated at About 15,000.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., June 5.—Latest returns from the South Dakota primary election indicate that the plurality for the Roosevelt delegates may reach 15,000. Returns from about 700 precincts in the State, this being about half of the precincts, give Byrne for Governor a lead of about 7,000 over Egan. For Congress Thomas Sterling's friends claim his nomination over Senator Gamble by about 8,000 plurality.

Returns thus far received in the Second Congressional District give Congressman Burke for renomination a lead of about 800 over Curtiss, his nearest Republican opponent. Congressman Martin is conceded to have won in the Third District. In the First Congressional District C. H. Dillon of Yankton has a lead apparently of about 800 over O. L. Branson of Mitchell.

MURPHY WOULD NAME MACK.

Seeks to Bar Frawley from Chairmanship of Panama Exposition Board.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 5.—Charles F. Murphy prevented the organization of the Panama Pacific Exposition Commission to-day, which is to represent New York State at the San Francisco Exposition in 1915 and supervise the construction of the New York State Building on the exposition grounds. The commission is made up of fifteen members, five each having been appointed by the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, and Speaker of the Assembly.

Originally the Legislature intended a commission of legislators only, but Gov. Dix made known that he would like to appoint some civilians, and so a new bill was introduced carrying out his wishes. While the legislation was pending it was understood that Senator James J. Frawley, Democrat, was to be the Chairman of the commission, and Assemblyman John R. Yale, Vice Chairman, and that the Republicans were to share in the subordinate positions. The commission consists of ten Democrats and five Republicans.

Before the meeting it was rumored that Charles F. Murphy was using pressure on the members to name Norman E. Mack, one of the Governor's appointees, as Chairman of the commission. Adjournment of the temporary organization was taken until Monday night next at the Hotel Knickerbocker, New York.

Senator Frawley had a majority of one, but under orders from Mr. Murphy no vote was taken. The change of the place of organization from Albany to New York will make it an easy matter for Murphy to elect Mr. Mack. The members of the commission who have given Senator Frawley their word that they will support him must obtain his release before they can support Mr. Mack.

WANT CLARK INSTRUCTIONS.

Speaker's Friends Work Hard for West Virginia Delegation.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., June 5.—Delegates from all parts of West Virginia arrived here to-night for the Democratic State Convention, which will assemble to-morrow to name six delegates at large to the Baltimore Convention.

It was said to-night that the friends of Speaker Clark would organize the convention and the delegates would be instructed for him, although there is opposition to specific instructions. Leaders assert that it has not been the custom to send an instructed delegation to a National convention from West Virginia, and it was said that some of the delegates, while favoring the nomination of Clark, objected to any action on the part of the State Convention that would hold them to his candidacy after the first ballot.

Frank P. McNeil, a college classmate of Clark, said that he would introduce a resolution insisting that the delegation be instructed to vote for the Speaker as long as there was any chance for his nomination.

Arkansas Is for Clark.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 5.—Arkansas's eighteen votes in the National Democratic Convention will be cast for Champ Clark for the Presidential nomination as long as his name is before the convention, according to the terms of a resolution adopted by the State Democratic committee here this afternoon.

BLAMELESS, SAYS McARTHUR

Innocent as a Babe in Atlanta Church Row, Declares Pastor.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 5.—"It is a shame to drag me into this row," said the Rev. Dr. Robert Stuart MacArthur to-day in referring to the dissension in the congregation of the Baptist Tabernacle, of which he is pastor.

"I am as innocent as a babe, as far as having anything to do with the causes of this unfortunate rupture. For forty-one years I was pastor in New York, and everything was as harmonious as could be desired, and now to take up a new work in Atlanta and have my name dragged into a row like this is a great shame."

All the Baptist ministers in Atlanta held a conference to-day to see if the trouble between Dr. MacArthur and some members could be patched up and Dr. MacArthur retained as pastor, but nothing definite resulted. Dr. MacArthur's opponents contend that he has tried to destroy the institutional work of the Tabernacle and has fought to introduce ritualism into the services. At the suggestion of the Baptist ministers, the Tabernacle congregation has decided to hold a thirty-hour prayer service in the hope of gaining Divine guidance in the controversy with Dr. MacArthur.

STRAUS MEMORIAL IN ASBURY

National Jewish Temple to be Erected in His Honor.

Special to The New York Times.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 5.—A movement is on foot which has for its object the erection of a National Jewish temple in this city as a memorial for Mr. and Mrs. Isidor Straus, who summered in Elberon, and who were lost with the Titanic. Mr. Straus presided at a meeting here last August, when plans for a Jewish temple were discussed. He was also the first contributor.

This Summer a temporary temple will be established here which will also serve as headquarters for the Memorial Committee. This committee at present consists of Jacob Katz and Isadore Schaffran of New York and Mrs. R. Brylawski and Mrs. M. Sterne of this city. The committee expects soon to outline its plans.

Berger Wins Wickersham's Aid in Behalf of Socialist Oleson.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Encouraged by a letter from Attorney General Wickersham recommending reopening of the case depriving Leonard Oleson of Seattle of citizenship because he was a Socialist, Representative Berger of Wisconsin declared to-day his intention of urging impeachment proceedings to-morrow against United States District Judge Hanford, who decided the issue.

Attorney General Wickersham's letter said in part:

"I have notified the United States attorney that, upon the facts stated by Judge Hanford in his decision, the department was of the opinion that a gross injustice had been done to Mr. Oleson in canceling his certificate of naturalization."

UNIT RULE DELIVERS OHIO TO GOV. HARMON

State's Forty-eight Delegates Will Vote for Him at Baltimore for President.

MAY BE A PROTEST FILED

Democrats Nominate Full Slate at the Toledo Convention, Naming Congressman J. M. Cox for Governor.

TOLEDO, Ohio, June 5.—Gov. Judson Harmon won his fight to-day in the Ohio Democratic Convention for the application of the unit rule by a vote of 597 to 355, and will have the undivided support of the State's forty-eight delegates in his candidacy for President at the Baltimore Convention.

The anti-Harmon forces, led by Mayor Newton D. Baker of Cleveland, made a determined fight on the unit rule question, and declared that they would file their protest at the National Convention.

Ninteen of the forty-two district delegates to the National Convention are Wilson adherents, elected at a direct primary, but under the unit rule will be obliged to cast their ballots for Harmon at Baltimore. Twelve delegates at large, with half a vote each, were named by Gov. Harmon, and formally approved by the convention. They are:

United States Senator Atlee Pomerene, former Gov. James E. Campbell, Lieut. Gov. Hugh L. Nichols, Hugh A. Daugherty, William A. Green, John K. Shuff, James W. McMahon, Thomas J. Cogan, James Ross, Congressman J. H. Goeke, J. H. Clark, and S. S. Thomas.

Friends of Gov. Harmon drafted the platform adopted, and dictated the nomination of the State ticket. Congressman James M. Cox of Dayton was nominated by acclamation for Governor. He is a progressive Democrat in politics, and the publisher of two Ohio newspapers. He is now serving his second term in Congress, and is 43 years old. Following is the complete ticket:

Congressman at Large—Robert Crosser.
Presidential Electors at Large—Wilson McBride, John McSweeney, Ernest B. Snyder.
Governor—Congressman James M. Cox.
Lieutenant Governor—Hugh L. Nichols.
Secretary of State—Charles L. Graves.
Treasurer of State—John P. Brennan.
Auditor of State—A. V. Donahey.
Attorney—General—Timothy S. Hogan.
Members Board of Public Works—William Samse, Tobias S. Schott.
State Dairy and Food Commissioner—Sylvanus E. Strode.
Commissioner of Common Schools—Frank W. Miller.

HARMON WIRES NOMINEE.

Will Turn Over Office in Good Condition, He Tells Cox.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, O., June 5.—Gov. Harmon expressed great gratification to-night over the action of the convention which praised his administration, indorsed him for President, and selected Harmon delegates at large to the Baltimore convention instructed to vote as a unit for him.

"I am greatly pleased with the result," said the Governor. "It is a splendid testimonial against the bitter fight made against me. It simply shows the people are with me. The farmers were so busy when the primaries were held that the vote was light, but the voters turned out all over the State and selected delegates for me to the state convention."

The selection by the Governor of United States Senator Pomerene to be a delegate is considered a magnanimous act, after the way Pomerene fought the unit rule, and shows how Gov. Harmon will stick to a friend. Gov. Harmon to-night wired James M. Cox, the nominee for Governor, as follows:

"Heartiest congratulation. Will have everything in good condition to turn over to you as my successor."

WILSON CLAIMS MINNESOTA.

Clark Men Fight To-day Against an Instructed Delegation.

Special to The New York Times.

DULUTH, Minn., June 5.—Indications this evening are that the Democratic State Convention to be held here to-morrow will send an instructed delegation of twenty-four to Baltimore for Wilson, but the Clark adherents are putting up a pretty preliminary fight and say that they concede nothing.

The Ramsey county delegation, including St. Paul, arrived in a special train with a band, and their headquarters at the St. Louis Hotel is a busy place. Former Gov. David R. Francis of Missouri happened to be in the State and he was pressed to come here by the Clark men, and arrived this evening. He says Clark will be the next President.

The Wilson men say that to-morrow's convention will surely send an instructed delegation, and that the Clark men have no hope of accomplishing anything further than to prevent instructing the delegation. There is a fight between Fred B. Lynch, National Committeeman, and T. T. Hudson of Duluth. Lynch seeks reelection. Hudson is a former National Committeeman from Minnesota.

DEMOCRATIC LEADER LOST.

National Committeeman from Nevada Has Been Missing for a Year.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 5.—Missing from his home in Reno, Nev., for nearly a year, the whereabouts of John Sunderland, Democratic National Committeeman from that State, is a puzzle to other members of the committee and to prominent Democrats of his State.

According to advices from Reno Mr. Sunderland disappeared about a year ago. He was prosperous in his business, it is said, and no reason can be assigned for his voluntarily leaving Nevada. Urey Woodson, Secretary of the Democratic National Committee, to-day announced that for the last six months he had been endeavoring to trace Sunderland.

"I have tried every way to find him," said Mr. Woodson, "but have been unsuccessful. He seems to have dropped off the earth. I communicated with Senator Newlands of that State and the Senator made an investigation. No trace of Sunderland could be found. My mail and a big stack of letters from other persons to Sunderland were found in the Post Office. If Sunderland does not show up another man will have to be appointed by the committee to take his place."

Friends of Mr. Sunderland in Reno say the committeeman had been out of the State for a year, but that he was supposed to be in San Francisco. At the Nevada Democratic State Convention Fred White presented a proxy from Sunderland which bore the date of May 22, 1912.

BRYAN STARTS ON A TRIP.

Incidentally He Will Drop In on Both the Conventions.

LINCOLN, Neb., June 5.—Before leaving last evening on a tour of the country which will require an absence from home of three months, William J. Bryan delivered a short address to the members of the Nebraska Press Association in session here.

He urged the editors to indorse in their resolutions the bill which has passed the lower House of Congress requiring newspapers to carry on their editorial page the names of the men or corporations which own them. Mr. Bryan's itinerary includes attendance at both the Republican National Convention, which he will attend as a working newspaper man, and the Democratic Convention, to which he is a delegate.

STOLEN CHILD HOME; YOUNG GIRL HAD HER

Kidnapper Wanted Work as Nurse and Took Sophie Weisberg to Practice On.

BOUGHT HER NEW CLOTHES.

Relatives Who Read of Kidnapping Ordered Her to Return Child, Which She Did After Dark.

Five-year-old Sophie Weisberg, who was kidnapped on Monday evening in the street in front of her father's home, 305 West 145th Street, is safe at home arrayed in new clothes and with her long hair cut in Buster Brown fashion. Sadie Rubin is in the West 125th Street Station locked up charged with kidnapping, though it was she who, after taking the little girl, returned her last night voluntarily.

Miss Rubin, who is twenty-one years old, wept in the station house, declaring that she had no intention of keeping the little girl, but simply wanted to practice to learn to be a nurse girl. She told how she had bought new clothes for the child and how well she had treated her, and in this Sophie concurred heartily. She seemed to have enjoyed her brief visit with Miss Rubin.

The young girl said that she had worked at many trades, but had never been able to earn much money, though her family needed money badly, and on Monday she answered an advertisement for a maid. She did not get the job and was wandering disconsolately through the streets when she saw little Sophie.

She was delighted with the appearance of the child, and without a thought that it was actual kidnapping, she took the little girl downtown with her to her home at 109 Canal Street. Her father was angry at having an extra mouth to feed, though Sadie explained that the little girl was lost, and that she could not leave her in the streets.

"Father drove me out," said Miss Rubin, "and I took Sophie to a relative's on Forsyth Street. Yesterday we went out, and I had her hair cut and bought her a Buster Brown suit."

The young woman said that yesterday her relatives saw the newspaper stories of the loss of Sophie, and ordered her to return the child.

She waited till night, she said, because she thought the streets would be deserted and she could leave the little girl and escape unnoticed. She put Sophie down in front of her home and had almost reached the elevated station at 145th Street and Eighth Avenue, when a neighbor of the Weisbergs caught sight of her and shouted to Policeman Barry of the West 152d Street Station. Barry raced up the elevated steps and caught the girl as she was boarding a train. Then he gathered up Sophie and escorted both of them to the station house, where Mr. and Mrs. Weisberg were sent for.

The parents wept at sight of their daughter and Sophie was overjoyed to see them. She had had a good time, however, and hadn't realized that she was stolen. She said there had been a little boy at the house to which she was taken and she had been told that he was her brother. She insisted all last night in referring to him as "Brother" whenever she spoke of him.

FREE, SAYS MAYOR, TO DO AS HE LIKES

No Organization or Leader Ever Hinted at Influencing Him—Names Troublous Ones.

SCHIEFFELIN FIRST OF ALL

And Finally Comes the Evening Post and Villard—Dines with His Department Heads, "All Gentlemen."

Mayor Gaynor was a real guest of honor last night because he was the guest of the heads of the various departments whom he had appointed to office and who honored him for it. There have been other similar dinners given to the Mayor, but this one was unusual in the sense that the Mayor had to listen to nobody's speech but his own. He had to listen to the song, "He's a Jolly Good Fellow," but this didn't count because the Mayor denied it a minute after it ended.

He also frankly said that if he had been compelled to listen to the speeches of his subordinates he was sure he couldn't stand it. During the earlier part of the dinner some of the more conscientious heads had been busy getting their thoughts in shape with a pencil and pad, and these were reluctantly put by when Corporation Counsel Watson said that only the Mayor, gentlemen, only the Mayor would make a speech. There were fifty at the dinner, and it was laid around the edges of a solid bank of flowers in the East Room of the Waldorf-Astoria.

When the Mayor rose to speak his hosts hoped he would talk a long time, and he did. He stood on his feet for an hour and talked to them familiarly and frankly. He said that he had declared in many speeches to Methodist Conferences and to other bodies that he had appointed twenty-six heads of departments, and he thought the figure was correct, but he had recently learned that the number was forty and that there they were, "all scholars and gentlemen."

No Leader Directed Him.

"Now let me say," the Mayor added, "that if I made good appointments I deserve little or no credit. As I went through the campaign on which I was elected I was beset on all sides by a terrible noise and fury and hints that I was the tool of an organization.

"Permit me to say to-night that before my nomination, not in the remotest degree, not even by a hint, not even by an adroit suggestion, was it communicated to me that I would be expected even to conform in my appointments to the wishes of any leader of any organization. I never heard any such thing. I was entirely free, therefore, when I became Mayor, to do as I saw fit.

"I had been engaged in reform work, I had done all that I could to uplift the community in which I lived, I had then gone upon the bench and I had no wish to leave the bench at all. I had been several times asked to run, three times for Mayor, and I think twice for Governor, but I thought it was better for me to remain a Judge. So that when it came in God's time when I should run for Mayor, I was allowed to run without the embarrassment of any requests or obligations whatever. And after I was elected no such obligation was put up to me at all. It is due to you and to others that I say that to-night, this being the first time that we ever came together, all of us."

Then the Mayor got around to the people "who do not want you or me to do a single thing right." He said that these people want them to do wrong in order that they may have "the pleasure of denouncing us." "But," said the Mayor, "we were brought up to do right and we could not do anything else if we tried." He spoke well of some of those who had opposed his nomination and election, and especially well of Otto Bannard, who ran against him for Mayor. He said a good word for Mr. Outerbridge of the Committee of 100 or 150, he did not know which. The Mayor said he had received valuable assistance from Mr. Towne of the Merchants' Association, whose desire it is to see this city prosper.

Sharp Rebuke of Schieffelin.

Then the Mayor spoke of those of the other kind, and he thought he could leave them nameless because they would be reconized just as well. There was laughter at this, and then Mr. Gaynor refused to leave one of them nameless, for he said:

"The chief of that tribe is a man who always signs his name in full, William J. Schieffelin. Never have I received a good word from that man, although I have been entirely willing to work with him and do anything good that he could suggest. I mention him as a type of all that class of people who are no good to the City of New York whatever."

The Mayor declared that now and then a "dead set" had been made by "certain absolutely corrupt newspaper proprietors" who want to break down some of my departments.

"I might pick out the Police Department as an example," he said. "Three times corrupt people, newspaper publishers and writers, have done all they could to break that department down, and also create insubordination in it. But they failed signally. When I came in office I took the Police Department and the Fire Department under my special attention. The widespread notion in these two departments was, and you know, gentlemen, whether it was true or not, I don't want to go into that, the widespread notion through the rank and file in both departments was that neither appointment nor promotion nor increase of salary nor any benefit could be obtained there except through influence and through money raised. We went in to break that down absolutely, and I am sorry to say that that seemed to excite the ill-will of certain corrupt people of this city more than anything that I undertook. But they are silent to-night. They have nothing to say, because they know that the rank and file of these two departments are now absolutely certain that there is no influence—political, ecclesiastical or money, or of anything else that can advance one of them a single step against the established order of appointing them in numerical order from the civil service list."

Then the Mayor admitted that he blundered a little. This admission made his hosts sit up and listen, but they took it easy again when the Mayor explained:

"The Evening Post and Villard, and such people say that I put my foot in it every day, and I have no objection to their keeping on thinking so. I had just as lief put my foot in it as out of it. But this I do know, that the merits of my administration rests with you, gentlemen, at this table to-night. Our Government is a government of laws and not of men. We don't want to put men into office in this country who are eager to exercise power.

DINES ROAD CONGRESS MAN.

W. Rees Jeffreys the Guest of the American Association.

The American Road Builders' Association, an organization of highway engineers and commissioners, tendered a dinner in the east ballroom of the Hotel Astor last night to W. Rees Jeffreys, General Secretary of the International Road Congress, which will meet next year in London. About fifty diners were present. Nelson P. Lewis, chief engineer of the New York City Board of Estiamte and President of the association, presided.

Mr. Jeffreys explained that his mission in this country is to interest American highway builders in the first congress of road constructors to be held in an English speaking country. He will make his headquarters in this city for two weeks, visiting Philadelphia and Washington from this city as a base, and will then tour the United States and Canada. The congress, he said, would consider not only rural highway problems, but city street problems.

LORIMER JOKES WITH KERN.

Interrupts Indiana Senator During Speech Urging His Expulsion.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Senator Kern of Indiana concluded to-day the second instalment of his speech in opposition to Senator Lorimer and gave notice that he would endeavor to conclude before adjournment to-morrow.

Senator Lorimer, who was in a very cheerful mood, expressed the opinion that the debate on his case would continue several weeks. Several times he interrupted Senator Kern and later talked with him, joking about those who would vote against him.

Discussing the existence of a jackpot in the Illinois Legislature previous to 1909, Mr. Kern spoke of ex-Speaker Miller of the Illinois Legislature, who, he said, had died after exposing the presence of that fund. The reference brought Senator Lorimer to his feet with a question.

"Does the Senator know," the accused Senator asked of the speaker, "that Gov. Deneen and the newspaper combination that is prosecuting this case drove Miller to his death by their persecution?"

Mr. Kern said he did not know it, but that if true the fact would accentuate his accusation that conditions at Springfield were of a character to shock the conscience of the country.

Challenging Mr. Kern's statement about the report of the majority of the committee, Senator Dillingham said there had been no evidence that there was a jackpot or that if there had been corruption Lorimer had not been connected with it. "I myself believe that previous to 1909 there had been corruption, but it was not proved," he said.

Later Mr. Lorimer again interrupted the speaker to correct the latter's statements concerning the Illinoisans attitude toward Gov. Deneen as a Senatorial candidate in 1909.

"It is only fair that the Senator should not misrepresent my attitude toward Gov. Deneen," he said. "My support was based on the theory that Deneen's election would be in the interest of the Republican Party. I never made any pretense that I favored him because I loved him, as the Senator from Indiana has stated."

MRS. SAINT-GAUDENS, CRITIC.

Says Boston Reproduction of Lincoln Statue Is Out of Proportion.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., June 5.—Members present when Mrs. Augustus Saint-Gaudens, widow of the sculptor, visited the Reading Room of the Chamber of Commerce Building this morning to examine the statute of Abraham Lincoln, presented to the Boston Chamber by the Chicago Association, were amazed and humiliated by her bitter criticism of the work.

The statue, which is the work of George E. Ganniere, a Chicago sculptor, is a reproduction of the statue of Lincoln in Lincoln Park, Chicago, which was the work of Saint-Gaudens.

"Mr. Saint-Gaudens never did work which looked like that," was one of Mrs. Saint-Gaudens's first remarks, as she gazed critically from the photographs of the original statue to the reproduction.

"Everything is exaggerated in this reproduction. The chair is all out of proportion, the pose of the head is wrong, the hand bent behind the back is wrong, the modeling of the metal base is wrong, even the name is wrong. Saint-Gaudens is the name. Instead of being spelled out with a hyphen, it is abreviated to St. Gaudens."

Continuing her criticism, Mrs. Saint-Gaudens said that although the chair which is behind Lincoln's standing figure is the same chair as the original, it is out of all reasonable proportion in the reproduction.

"The figure is far too tall for the chair," she said.

The folds of the clothing formed the subject of an extensive criticism by the widow, who stated most emphatically that her husband never modeled Lincoln's or anybody else's clothing in that manner.

As Mrs. Saint-Gaudens was leaving she said that she hoped to be able to have an immense reproduction of the Chicago original made to be placed in Washington, D. C.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 5.—George E. Ganniere, who modeled the copy of Augustus Saint-Gaudens's Lincoln statue, said to-night that Mrs. Saint-Gaudens's attack on him and his work was not unexpected.

"I did not pretend to copy each identical line of the clothing as depicted in the original—I merely sought to achieve such a characterization of Lincoln as has been so ably represented in the original statue. I have learned since my work was completed that Mrs. Saint-Gaudens has what she terms an authorized copy of the original statue, which measures just a trifle more than mine, and it is possible that she feels that the committee should have purchased this from her.

"My work was approved by Lorado Taft, Eugene U. Kimbark, the President of the association; Edward D. Case, the Chairman of the committee which supervised the matter; Francis T. Simmons, the President of the Lincoln Park Board, and the custodian of the original for twelve years, as well as by numerous others, all competent to judge of its merits."

PARK NO PLACE FOR LIBRARY.

Scenic and Historic Preservation Society Opposes Mr. Frick's Proposal.

The Executive Committee of the American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society has adopted a resolution opposing the re-erection of the Lenox Library Building within Central Park. It takes the same attitude in opposing the scheme as it did toward the proposal to erect a home for the National Academy of Design on the site of the Arsenal, contending that only such buildings as are absolutely necessary for the administration of the Park should be erected within its borders.

The committee believes that public sentiment is overwhelmingly opposed to the placing of the old library within the Park, although it appreciates the generosity of Mr. Frick's offer, and it expresses the hope that another more suitable site may be found, to which the building may be transferred.

The committee also suggests that the Commissioner's offices and all other structures, except the Metropolitan Museum of Art and park administration buildings, should be moved from the Park, and that the Commissioner might find desk room in the new Municipal Building, when it is completed.

FLYNN SUES FOR $25,000.

Secret Service Head Accuses Former Operative of Defaming Him.

William J. Flynn, head of the United States Secret Service for the Eastern District, started a $25,000 suit for defamation of character yesterday in the Supreme Court against Otto F. Klinke, a former operative, whom he charges with having inspired The New York American to attack him. The suit is based on allegations that Klinke told persons outside the Secret Service that Flynn had ordered him to procure information for the son of Chief Wilkie. Klinke's answer was not filed yesterday.

STANDARD OIL MONEY TO EXTEND CHILDS CO.

Nation Will Be Girdled by a Chain of Cheap Restaurants on Old Trust Profits.

E. T. BEDFORD CONFIRMS IT

But Insists That It Is an Enterprise of Individuals and Not of the Standard Oil as a Company.

To the many mercantile and commercial enterprises controlled by the Standard Oil interests has been added the great chain of eating places conducted by the Childs Restaurant Company, according to a statement made yesterday by Edward T. Bedford, Vice President of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. Mr. Bedford made it clear that the Standard Oil Company as a corporation had not become interested in the restaurants, but admitted that certain stockholders in Standard Oil had diverted a portion of their profits to buy stock in the Childs Company.

Several years ago the men who established the Childs restaurants were in need of funds to carry out a plan they had for an extension of the chain of restaurants to cities outside of New York State. In order to raise the necessary money the company issued additional stock and succeeded in interesting men of financial power in the possibilities of the cheap restaurant business. Among those who then took stock in the company were several men closely identified with the Standard Oil Company, including Charles Sweeny, H. M. Tilford, and one or two others. Recently the stock interests of these oil men have been increased and the scope of the Childs Restaurant Company again extended. A real estate department has been established, and at the present time a scheme of establishing a Nation-wide chain of cheap restaurants is being considered.

"I knew at the time," said Mr. Bedford yesterday, "that a number of my colleagues in Standard Oil had formed a syndicate for the purpose of purchasing some of the Childs restaurant stock, but I am not aware of the amount acquired by them, either individually or collectively.

"The Messrs. Rockefeller, Mr. Rogers, and myself did not go into the investment, and while the men who did go in may be said to have used Standard Oil profits or profits from their Standard Oil holdings, the Standard Oil Company as a corporation is in no way identified with this enterprise."

It has long been understood in Wall Street that Standard Oil money was back of the Childs Company, and the official confirmation of that fact yesterday caused little surprise. The profits of the men who hold the largest blocks of Oil stock have been so great that they have been forced to go far afield to find investment uses for it.

At one time or another nearly every kind of manufactured commodity has been reported under the control of the Standard group. On some occasions, when reports that the Oil Trust or its officers had secured control of another industry had been widely circulated, the company decided that the story merited a formal denial, but in general these reports have been ignored and many of them later have turned out to be baseless.

The country's largest bank, the National City, always has been known as a Standard Oil institution, although under different Directorates. Standard Oil money is also supposed to control the Consolidated Gas Company and the New York Edison Company. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul is the most important railroad identified with Standard Oil interests, and the Amalgamated Copper Company is the best known industrial in which this same group has large investments. It has been popularly believed that the Oil group control the Riker-Hegeman combination of drug stores, as well as some of the proprietary articles dispensed from those stores.

Another report which has never been confirmed credits the men who have made millions from the oil business with owning the Borden's Condensed Milk Company. While they are distinct concerns, the largest holders of Corn Products Refining Company shares have been men affiliated with the Oil Trust.

Strictly speaking, none of these companies probably is owned by the Standard Oil Company. They have become known as Standard Oil properties through the discovery that men who have been closely identified with John D. Rockefeller have acquired large interests in them.

TO PAY AMERICAN CLAIMS.

Senate Committee for This Country Doing So and Reimbursed by Mexico.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations took action practically in favor of speedy payment by the American Government of the claims for damages arising from injuries inflicted upon Americans on American soil on the occasion of battles on the Mexican frontier in the Madero revolution. The plan contemplates a subsequent diplomatic presentation of the claims for settlemen en bloc to the Mexican Government to reimburse the American treasury.

The question came up in consideration of the resolution offered by Senator Smith, of Arizona, directing the Department of State to appraise the claims and push them in the city of Mexico. The Committee, however, were of the opinion that a speedier settlement could be effected from Mexico if we first showed our serious purpose in settling the claims ourselves.

No definite resolution was adopted, but the whole question was referred for further investigation to a sub-committee consisting of Senators Root, Burton, and Bacon.

The committee expects to recommend claims to Congress with the recommendation that an appropriation be made to pay them.

TO INDICT 37 IN ATLANTIC CITY

Prosecutor So Plans—Grand Jury Meets Wednesday.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 5.—From men in the confidence of Burns employes it was learned to-night that evidence against gratting Councilmen and other officials will be presented to the regular Grand Jury when it reconvenes next Wednesday. This was decided upon at a conference between Gov. Wilson and Attorney General Wilson in Trenton to-day.

The plan of County Prosecutor Goldenburg is to have the Grand Jury issue a blanket indictment. It is declared that thirty-seven individuals will be named.

Among the thirty-seven are twenty-nine who, it is believed, have confessed, their signed revelations practically uncovering every bit of scandal and touching upon the work of politicians and former office holders who are laboring under the belief that the inquiry has not extended to them.

Burns has sent two of his best operatives here to take up the end of the investigation that he dropped several days ago.

The men were instructed, it is said, to pay particular attention to the politicians who are under suspicion in connection with affairs that were recently before the public, and which are in no way related to the Boardwalk "frame-up." Any evidence obtained by these detectives will be laid before the Grand Jury.

ARKANSAS MEETS TESTS.

Battleship's Speed Runs Show That Reef Did Not Greatly Damage Her.

ROCKLAND, Me., June 5.—As if to confirm the builders' statement that the battleship Arkansas was not seriously damaged by her encounter with the uncharted reef near Two Bush Island on Sunday night, the vessel on her standardization runs to-day covered one mile at the rate of 21.9 knots an hour. She averaged 21½ knots for her five fastest runs.

Three runs were made at approximately 20½ knots, the speed called for in the Government contract, and then the battleship began to go up and down the mile course more than a knot faster.

Officials said that the ship did not draw out her reserve power, using only 175 pounds of steam in the high-pressure turbine, this being the contract limit for producing the required speed of 20½ knots. The Board of Inspection and Survey pronounced the trial one of the most successful it has yet supervised.

Anchor and compass tests followed the speed run.

INSURANCE MEN RELIEVED.

Accident to the Battleship Arkansas Worried London Firms.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Thursday, June 6. — The Times says the marine insurance market has been glad to receive further news of the American battleship Arkansas. The statement that the cost of the repairs will be borne by the builders is important to the market, since the hull and machinery were insured for gradually increasing amounts, the sum finally reached being £905,000 ($4,525,000.) The armament, which is the property of the United States Government, is not insured here. The present impression is that in proportion to the high values any claim is unlikely to prove very formidable.

SEE BEACH'S STAINED KNIFE.

Aiken Jury Told That the Stains Were of Blood.

Special to The New York Times.

AIKEN, S. C., June 5.—Pearl Hampton, the negro woman who was attacked presumably by the same man who murderously assaulted Mrs. Frederick O. Beach on the night of Feb. 26, did not testify before the Grand Jury, which yesterday indicted Beach for assault and battery with intent to kill his wife.

Members of the Grand Jury state that the Hampton woman will maintain that she does not know who it was who attacked her, and that her testimony was of a negligible quality.

The finding of Beach's blood-stained pocketknife and the circumstances relating to how it was obtained by Detective Baughn form perhaps the strongest evidence presented and went far toward convincing the Grand Jury that the Beach case should go before a petit jury.

Dr. Hastings Wyman, member of the City Council, who has the knife in his keeping, states that the stains on the knife are of blood and that the nature of Mrs. Beach's wound showed conclusively that it had been made with a weapon such as the little blade of the knife. This blade is missing. He exhibited the knife and showed the Grand Jurors the blood stains under a microscope.

It was learned to-day that after hearing several witnesses yesterday afternoon the Grand Jury on a first vote were equally divided as to their opinion of Beach's guilt, on a second ballot Twelve of the sixteen grand jurors voted for indictment. This met the requirements of the law.

According to the lawyer of Frederick O. Beach, who has been indicted at Aiken, S. C., on the charge of assaulting his wife with intent to kill, the indictment was a mere formality and will lead to nothing.

"This action was a foregone conclusion," said T. S. Fuller yesterday. "It is nothing more than a formal step in the ill-advised prosecution which the authorities of Aiken have been induced to undertake. Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Beach nor any of their witnesses appeared before the Grand Jury."

Mr. Fuller explained that his client had asked for an immediate trial of his case, but that the authorities had decided that the case will not be reached before September.

"When the case comes up at that time," he continued, "the truth will bring out the absurdity and cruelty of the charges brought against Mr. Beach."

DINES GERMAN OFFICERS.

President Taft Host to Men of Visiting Fleet—The Guests.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Rear Admiral von Rebeur-Paschwitz, commanding the German fleet now in American waters, with nineteen junior officers, including a Prince of the house of Hessen, have been the centre of attraction to-day for official and social Washington. They were received by the President this afternoon and entertained at dinner this evening.

For the dinner the table was placed on the west terrace, with the Marine Band playing on the lawn to the south. In the company were the President, the German Ambassador, the Secretary of the Navy, Senator George C. Perkins, Rear Admiral Von Reuber-Paschwitz, Capt. Ritter von Mann Edler von Tiechler, Capt. Krosigk, Capt. Seebohm, Chief Surgeon Auer, Commander Boy-Ed, Lieut. Commander Klappenbach, Lieut. Commander Prentzel, Lieut. Commander Kirchner, Lieut. Commander Dums, Lieut. Commander Schirmacher, Lieut. Commander von Jorek, Lieut. Commander Scharrschmidt, Chief Engineer Grube, Lieut. Middendorf, Lieut. Shickhardt, Lieut. Galster, Lieut. Andler, Chief Engineer Knoke, Lieut. Christian Prince von Hessen, Engineer Teichmitt, Rear Admiral Richard Wainwright, Rear Admiral Charles E. Vreeland, Rear Admiral Aaron Ward, Rear Admiral Charles J. Badger, Capts. Templin M. Potts, Herbert O. Dunn, Thomas S. Rodgers, William R. Shoemaker; Commanders Victor Blue, Reginald R. Belknap, George W. Laws, and Powers Symington; Lieut. Commanders Orton P. Jackson, David F. Sellers, Leigh C. Palmer, Needham L. Jones, David F. Boyd, and William F. Bricker; Lieuts. John W. Timmons, and Byron A. Long.

At 1 o'clock the German Ambassador entertained the visitors at breakfast at Rauscher's, where covers were laid for 110. There was no formal seating of the guests beyond the fact that the host had at his right hand Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, with the Admiral of the fleet opposite. Each table was laid for eight or ten guests.

In addition to Admiral Paschwitz, who ten years ago was Naval Attaché of the German Embassy, and Mrs. Longworth, the guests at the Ambassador's table were Capt. Ritter von Mann of the Moltke, Mrs. E. A. Mitchell, Mrs. Spencer Cosby, Mrs. Reynolds Hitt, Rear Admiral Charles Badger, Rear Admiral Aaron Ward of the United States Navy. All the officers were in full uniform.

DEFENDS ALIENATION SUIT.

Sheehy Disavows Knowing Woman Whose Husband Asks $100,000.

Frank Sheehy of 1,00 4Tinton Avenue, the Bronx, against whom suit has been brought by John A. Walsh of 31 Hunters Point Avenue, Long Island City, for $100,000 for alienation of Mrs. Walsh's affections, testified yesterday before Justice Kelley in the Supreme Court in Long Island City, that he did not even know the woman, and that he had never heard of Walsh until the suit was begun against him. H. F. Lawrence, attorney for Sheehy, told the court that Walsh had had five lawyers, and that the case twice had been stricken from the calendar.

"This man is insane or else this case is blackmail," he declared.

Walsh testified that his wife, whom he married when she was 16 years old in 1893, left him in 1905, and that he saw her with Sheehy on two occasions when they entered houses near Eighty-third Street and Third Avenue.

Justice Kelley directed the jury to bring in a sealed verdict this morning.

7 convenient stations on 4 high speed electric railroads

This indicates the extent of the transportation facilities enjoyed by New Rochelle. At the principal station in the centre of the town 33 electrically-operated trains can be taken daily on the New Haven Main Line to the Grand Central Terminal. Returning you have the choice of 40 trains. From the same station 28 trains a day run each way over the Harlem River Branch, now being electrified, connecting with the Third and Second Avenue Elevated trains at the Harlem River. The New York, Westchester & Boston Railway, the most complete electric railway ever built, is now running 60 trains daily and Sunday between three stations in the built-up portion of and 180th Street, The Bronx, where a connection with the Subway is being constructed. It will shortly have trains running to Wykagyl, the famous golf links, in the northern part of the town, and to historic Quaker Ridge. A little later its trains will connect with the Elevated system at the Harlem River. This foots up over 120 trains a day into and out of New York. It's like living in New York with all the comfort and pleasures of suburban life. Let us tell you more about it. Send for booklet on New Rochelle.

Men's Two-Piece Suits
at Saks'

¶ The two-piece suit, or coat and trousers suit, is the most effectual solution of the warm weather problem in clothes. But there are two considerations in a two-piece suit, which call for the most competent tailoring. In the first place, the mere omission of the waistcoat will not suffice. The coat must be so tailored as to obviate the need of a vest in a logical manner. In the second place, as the fabrics are extremely light in weight and the hardest to tailor, only skill in the handling can produce ideal results.

¶ But you will appreciate all this much better if you put on a Saks two-piece suit and take a critical survey of it in the mirror. It has a negligee appearance, but not to the exclusion of style in its lines. It is congenial in fit, yet it has lost none of that trimness which is so marked in a Saks three-piece garment. In fact, a Saks two-piece suit is tailored as such, and conveys a two-piece impression, and not the impression that you are wearing a three-piece suit and have shed the waistcoat.

¶ We are showing any number of two-piece suits, in one, two, three and four button models, in double breasted models, and in smart Norfolk styles. They are made in tropical worsteds, serges and crashes that are wonderfully light and cool: in coarse homespuns that are an avenue for every breeze that blows; and in a dozen or more other fabrics, domestic and imported, but all of an intensely tropical turn of mind. Just the thing for June, a vital necessity in July, indispensable in August, and a boon companion in September. Tailored by Saks, every stitch of them.

MOTIVE FOR WERNER SUICIDE.

Charity Organization Society Says It Was Not Poverty.

The motive which led Mrs. Gabrielle N. Werner and her son Ansel to end their lives and take Ansel's little daughter with them to death in their apartment on the second floor of the house at 246 Bradhurst Avenue on Tuesday morning was not poverty, according to the story written on the records of the Charity Organization Society, whose investigator, Mrs. Denning, called at the house shortly after the dead persons were found in the gas-filled rooms. The Werners were borne down under a disgrace that broke their spirits.

It was more than a month ago that the society received word of the family as one needing help and Mrs. Denning was sent to investigate. Three times she visited the mother, but each time the offer of assistance was refused with the explanation that it was not needed. Her report made at the time of each visit shows this, but it was so apparent that there was sorrow or trouble of some sort in the household that the charity worker returned twice, trying to win the woman's confidence.

On the day of the third visit the reserve seemed to be breaking down a little, and it was then, on May 22, that Mrs. Werner said that one who was very near and dear to them had disgraced herself.

"It is too awful to tell," the woman said. "Instead, I'm going to write it to you."

But the thing that she wrote was this: "When you get this note we will be dead. It was too much. Please say nothing in the house that I was talking to you."

The note was mailed Monday night. It reached Mrs. Denning too late, but she feels sure that it was not poverty that was "too much."

TWO PLANS FOR FOURTH.

One Electrical Illumination, the Other Fireworks—Districts Can Choose.

The Executive Committee of Mayor Gaynor's safe and sane fourth of July Celebration Committee voted yesterday to allow the various Aldermanic districts to choose for themselves between an electric illumination and a display of fireworks. The committee was told that some of the districts, particularly those in Queens and Richmond, where the facilities for fireworks displays are better than in the more crowded districts, preferred fireworks.

In Manhattan and the Bronx it is likely that electrical illumination will be used extensively. The probable plan will be an illumination of approximately two city blocks in each aldermanic district. With the illumination there will be a band concert and such other features as the committees appointed for the various districts prepare.

Isaac L. Seligman, Treasurer of the committee, has thus far received $6,498 in subscriptions. In order that all the plans of the committee may be carried out it will be necessary to raise $50,000 in addition to the $50,000 voted by the Aldermen. Another general appeal has been sent out to the citizens asking them to subscribe. Among the larger subscriptions received during the week were $100 each from Helen Gould, James Douglas, James A. Hearn & Co., and James Speyer, and $50 contributions from R. A. C. Smith, Marc Eidlitz & Son, the Centaur Company, and Mortimer L. Schiff.

THE TIMES'S WIRELESS AND CABLE DISPATCHES

LONG SHOT RUNS OFF WITH ENGLISH DERBY

Sweeper II., H. B. Duryea's American Entry, Hopelessly Beaten, While Tagalie Wins.

BELMONT'S COLORS THIRD

One Consolation Is That Victorious Filly Was Ridden by Johnny Reiff —New Yorkers See Race.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, June 5.—Again the classic Derby goes to an English-bred entry. W. Raphael's filly Tagalie, a long shot, won the event at Epsom Downs this afternoon to the grief of hundreds of Americans who had traveled down from London to back Sweeper II., the French-born but American-owned entry of Herman B. Duryea of New York and Lexington, Ky.

Sweeper II. was a keen disappointment to the patriotic backers of the Stars and Stripes. In a large field he finished a poor seventh. A crumb of consolation to the loyal Americans who saw the contest was afforded in the fact that the speedy winner was piloted over the turf and first under the wire by New York's own "Johnny" Reiff.

Tagalie was a 100 to 8 shot, and she won in the rather ordinary time of 2:38 4-5.

Besides being the favorite, Sweeper II. carried a world of money, sentimental bets placed by friends of Mr. Duryea and the countless Americans who would have backed him had he stood on but three legs.

L. Newman's Jaeger was second, but in the third horse Americans found a little more comfort, for August Belmont's Tracery nosed out the nearest contender, King George's Pintadeau.

"I have no excuse to offer," said Mr. Duryea immediately at the conclusion of the race when seen in his box by a correspondent for THE NEW YORK TIMES. "Sweeper was beaten by a better horse. He was at his best possible condition and he ran well, but he was not good enough for the Derby distance.

"I am sorry my friends lost on him, but I personally had down a very small bet."

With Mr. Duryea at the time was J. Pierpont Morgan, who, however, refused to say anything about the race, although any one could see his keen disappointment over the result. This also was the case with hundreds of Americans who went to Epsom full of hope for the success of the American horse, moreover backing it with good money, some to a very substantial extent.

In the adjoining box to Mr. Duryea and Mr. Morgan was Richard Croker with a party of friends, including his niece, Mrs. W. Bowman, and Annette Kellermann. Mr. Croker recalled the victory of Orby several years ago, mentioning the fact that he has several entries in preparation for next year's Derby, with a strong hope of landing a winner.

Among the other Americans, Mr. Croker, too, plunged on Sweeper, feeling the defeat of the Duryea colors keenly.

"It is a magnificent spectacle," said Mr. Croker, as the horses came in sight, eight in a bunch, around Tattenham Corners. "There is nothing like it in the world."

A few moments later the horses flashed by the grand stand. It was seen that the green and white, Mr. Duryea's colors, were nowhere in it.

"It is too bad," said Mr. Croker. "What a disappointment!"

Then the ladies in the party realized that their dreams of certain hats, dresses, and gloves, dependent upon American success, were shattered. Near by was another Tammany chieftain, "Big" Tim Sullivan, who had in his party Col. Mike Padden, Henry Apfelbaun, and Edward Downing.

Like every other American, Mr. Sullivan had backed Sweeper II., though he particularly declared "not heavily."

"Just came down for a quiet afternoon's sport," said Mr. Sullivan, "and I have enjoyed it very much. I am not playing them strong," he added, "as he handed a hundred pound note to a bookmaker on the first race.

Although a large number of Americans were seen in the grand stand, paddock, and Tattersalls, more especially in the last place, where the air was redolent with cries of "Three to one on Sweeper," it was noticeable that but really few prominent persons were present at this year's race. Among those noticed were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Nelson Page, who with Major and Mrs. Burtonby, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Hine, Mr. and Mrs. A. Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Emmet, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Crocker, and Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Warren, who had seats in the grand stand.

Strolling in the paddock were Harry S. Black, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Hanna, Harry La Montague, Mr. and Mrs. A. Munn and party, and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Rais. Others seen during the day were Hermann Oelrichs, William Kelly, W. R. Coe, Paul Rainey, Mr. and Mrs. John C. King, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Shipley Blood, Mrs. Putnam, Mrs. H. G. Smith and her party, including Mrs. W. E. Corey and Mrs. A. Goodyear.

Other New Yorkers present were Judge Coyle, Andrew Miller, Robert Winmill, and Lieuts. Barney Flood and Joseph Reilly. The theatrical profession was represented by Arnold Daly, Charles Dillingham, Fanny Ward, Joe Coyne, Ben Harris, Irving Berlin, and Kid McCoy. As usual Alfred Vanderbilt went to Epsom by coach with a party of friends.

Tod Sloane, in describing the race for the Daily Express, calls the jockeyship a disgrace to England. Eight of the twenty riding in the race, he says, were, according to the styles, American, French, and Colonial, and the horsemanship of the English jockeys, he declares, was indescribably bad, showing neither skill nor nerve.

For some reason, Mr. Raphael, the owner of Tagalie, was not included among the guests of the King at the Derby Day dinner at Buckingham Palace.

"NO EXCUSE," SAYS DURYEA.

Sweeper Clearly Outrun, and Would Not Move, Adds Jockey Maher.

EPSOM DOWNS, England, June 5.—W. Raphael's Tagalie, a 100 to 8 shot, ran away with the classic Derby at Epsom Downs to-day, contested in the presence of the King and Queen and tens of thousands of sport lovers. L. Newmann's Jaeger, at odds of 8 to 1 in the betting, was second, four lengths behind the winner, while August Belmont's Tracery, against whom 66 to 1 was wagered, in a splendid final effort crossed the line a scant two lengths in the rear of Jaeger. Sweeper II, the favorite, the entry of H. B. Duryea of New York and Lexington, Ky., was hopelessly in the ruck. The time of the winner was 2.38 4-5.

The King's entry, Pintadeau, a sentimental choice that carried a faint hope of success, finished fourth. The winner was ridden by Johnny Reiff, an American. Danny Maher was up on Sweeper II. Tagalie, at this time a rank outsider in the betting, won the One Thousand Guineas Stakes at Newmarket on May 3. By capturing the blue ribbon turf event to-day the filly earned for her owner $32,500. The course which the 3-year-old had to make was about one mile and a half.

The display made by Sweeper II was most disappointing and his position of seventh at the finish was the nearest he got to the front. Mr. Duryea and Danny Maher were greatly chagrined.

"I was never so disappointed in my life," said the jockey. "I looked upon the race as a certainty. I got Sweeper II in a good position, but when it came to the pinch I could not get him to move. He was not in his usual form and seemed a different horse to the winner of the Two Thousand Guineas Stakes."

The only consolation for the Americans, of whom many were on hand, was the third place won by Mr. Belmont's entry and which was obtained only after a sharp tussle with Pintadeau, who fought every foot of the final stretch.

Mr. Duryea, while naturally keenly disappointed received the result smilingly, and said, with a shrug of his shoulders, that he had no excuses to offer. Horse and jockey had done their best, he said.

The crowd at the historic Downs was quite up to the usual for the Derby, despite the threatening weather. King George and Queen Mary and the Royal party were early arrivals and received a tumultuous greeting.

Richard Croker, whose Derby candidate was scratched, was at the track interested in his entry for the last race of the day. Tod Sloan, the American jockey, was here resuming acquaintance with the scene of his past successes.

H. B. Duryea, the American owner of the favorite Sweeper II, was early in consultation with his trainer and Danny Maher, who was to carry Duryea's colors.

Sweeper II. did a sharp burst of six furlongs during the morning, showing splendid action, but for some reason the layers were inclined to the field against the American horse and the betting lengthened to 1,000 to 300.

The stands were crowded with society folk and the heath was thronged with tens of thousands of holiday makers. A. G. Vanderbilt's and other coaches filled with brightly dressed women lined the rails opposite the stand, and the whole scene was brilliant, with only threatening clouds to interfere with the pleasure of the multitude.

Tagalie's Race All the Way.

It was Tagalie's race from start to finish. Ridden with consummate judgment by Johnny Reiff, the filly jumped off in the lead, followed by Orchestrion, who was ridden by another American, Milton Henry, White Star, and Javelin with Pintadeau, the King's entry, Sweeper II., the American favorite, and two others some distance behind.

The Duryea horse, the choice of the talent, never showed to advantage. Rounding Tattenheim Corners, Tagalie led by half a length with the field in much the same order as they got away. Two furlongs from home the filly, still traveling in splendid form, had the race at her mercy.

Mr. Belmont's Tracery came through the ruck with a rush, but Tagalie made the remainder of the running and won in a canter.

WALL STREET HIT BY RACE.

Sweeper II. Said to Have Carried $100,000 of New York Money.

When the ticker flashed the news yesterday that the American horse Sweeper II., from the stable of H. B. Duryea, had lost the Derby, gossips calculated that Wall Street had lost close to $100,000.

The tale ran that J. P. Morgan was a guest of Mr. Duryea, and that some of his friends here had learned that the American horse had been looked upon by his owner as a sure winner. The bets were said to have been placed by cable through London brokerage houses which have offices here.

Auto Victim's Father Drops Dead.

Upon being informed yesterday that his eight-year-old son Harold, who was run down two weeks ago by an automobile, was likely to die, Thomas J. Cummings, the proprietor of Cummings's Hotel, at Greenpoint Avenue and West Street, fell dead in his home at 67 Greene Street, Williamsburg. Last night the boy was still alive, but very low.

EDWARD VII. OPPOSED ASQUITH'S POLICIES

Article in Dictionary of National Biography Supplement Throws Light on His Reign.

THOUGHT LORDS A BULWARK

And Tried to Prevent Rejection of Budget, Which Caused Their Loss of Power—The King's Character.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, June 5. — New light on King Edward VII. is thrown by the story of his life, written by Sir Sidney Lee, in the Supplement to the Dictionary of National Biography.

Sir Sidney had access to private sources of information which have enabled him to make important disclosures in regard to recent history.

It is often assumed that a constitutional monarch has no opinions. Sir Sidney Lee shows that King Edward, while acting strictly as a constitutional ruler, not only had opinions, but also did not hesitate to make them known in the proper quarters.

The much debated question as to King Edward's attitude to Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George's budget of 1909 and the action of the Peers is at last cleared up definitely. Sir Sidney says:

"The King demurred to any alteration in the statutes for the composition of the upper house, which, in his view, as in that of his mother, was a bulwark of the hereditary principle of monarchy. The proposal on the part of the Conservative Peers to meet the outcry against the House of Lords by converting it, partly or wholly, into an elective body, conflicted as directly with the King's predilection as the scheme for restricting its veto. The King deprecated raising the question in any form.

"In the Autumn of 1909 a very practical turn was given the controversy by the Lords' threat to carry their antagonism to the budget to the length of rejecting it. Despite his dislike of the budget, the King believed that the Lords were herein meditating a tactical error, and he resolved, for the first time, to exert his personal influence to prevent what he judged to be a political disaster."

Sir Sidney Lee relates how King Edward invited to Balmoral various Peers and the Right Hon. H. J. Balfour. "Although," he says, "these negotiations could only be strictly justified by the emergency, there was no overstepping the limits of the rayal power. Mr. Asquith was willing that the interviews should take place and the conversations were in each case immediately communicated by the King to the Prime Minister in personal audience. The King was in no way involved in Mr. Asquith's declaration at the Albert Hall on the eve of the general election in December, 1909, that he would not again assume or hold office without the safeguards necessary to give legislative effect to the decisions of the majority of the Commons."

The assertion occasionally made that the Liberal policy hastened King Edward's death is thus dealt with by Sir Sidney:

"The King, for his part, did not believe that the deadlock between the Peers and the Commons would be pressed to the last extremity, and was content to watch the passage of events without looking beyond the needs of the moment.

"The political difficulty caused the King anxiety and irritation which domestic policy had not previously occasioned him. He found no comfort in the action of any parties to the strife. The blank refusal of the Conservative leader to entertain his warning was unwelcome to his amour propre. The prospect of straining his prerogative by creating Peers solely for voting purposes could not be other than uncongenial. * * *

"To the last he privately cherished the conviction that peace would be reached by some less violent means. His natural buoyancy of disposition and numerous social pleasures and interests outside of the political sphere eventually counteracted the depressing influence of public affairs."

Sir Sidney Lee declares that it is a fallacy to suppose that King Edward played a part in foreign politics. The title of "Roi Pacificateur," which French journalists bestowed on him, was, it is asserted, symbolically just, but misleading. No direct responsibility for the initiation or conclusion of the Entente Cordiale belonged to him.

"A modest estimate," says Sir Sidney, "was set on his political acumen when in informal talk he traveled beyond safe generalities. In the intimacies of private intercourse he may at times have advanced personal opinions on diplomatic themes which lacked official sanction, but to his unguarded utterances no real weight was attached in official circles either at home or abroad.

"Foreign statesmen and rulers knew that no subtler aim really underlay his movements than a wish for friendly social intercourse with them and the enjoyment of life under foreign skies quite unencumbered by the burden of diplomatic anxieties."

In this respect particularly Sir Sidney runs counter to the popular opinion of the late monarch.

Sir Sidney sums up the character of King Edward as follows:

"King Edward cannot be credited with the greatness that comes of statesmanship and makes for the molding of history. Neither the constitutional checks on his power nor his discursive tastes and training left him much opportunity of influencing political affairs.

"No originating political faculty can be assigned to him. On questions involving large principles he held no very definite views. He preferred things to remain as they were.

"A man of the world, he lacked the intellectual equipment of a thinker, and showed on occasions unwillingness to exert his mental power.

"He was no reader of books; he could not concentrate his mind on them; yet he was always eager for information, and gathered orally very varied stores of knowledge.

"A rare aptitude for rapidly assimilating the outlines of a topic enabled him to hold his own in brief talks with experts in every subject. He did not sustain conversation with much power of brilliance, but his grace and charm of manner atoned for any deficiency of matter."

PORTUGUESE CABINET QUITS.

New Ministry to be a Coalition of Various Republican Groups.

LISBON, June 5.—The Vasconcellos Cabinet resigned to-day as the result of discord between the parliamentary groups headed respectively by Señors Camacho and Alfonso Costa. The Costa group demanded the resignation of the Minister of the Interior.

It is understood that the new Ministry will be a coalition of the various Republican groups with the object of satisfying all parties.

THE TIMES'S DAILY TRANSATLANTIC WIRELESS AND CABLE DISPATCHES

PASTEL BY LA TOUR SOLD FOR $120,000

Highest Price Ever Paid for a Work in That Medium Is Given at the Doucet Sale.

TOTAL FOR DAY $720,000

Record for a Single Session of an Auction Sale—Works by Fragonard and Perronneau Bring Big Figures.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 5.—The sum of $720,000 realized to-day, the first day of the sale of the famous Doucet collection of French works of art of the eighteenth century, is believed to be a record for a single session of an auction sale.

The salesroom in the Georges Petit Gallery was crowded to overflowing with amateurs, dealers, and experts.

Great excitement and enthusiasm were displayed over the enormous prices obtained for some of the lots.

The following were some of the principal prices:

Among the drawings by Boucher, "Love Carried by the Graces," fetched $4,220; "Young Girl and Dove" fetched $3,040, and "Children Among Vines," $2,330.

"The Return from the March," by J. B. Huet, fetched $5,820.

Two drawings by J. M. Moreau, "The Marriage Feast of Marie Antoinette," and "Portrait of Mme. Papillon de La Ferte," realized $4,600 and $4,420, respectively.

There was brisk bidding over "The Musician," by J. A. Portail, which was purchased by Baron Gunzbourg for $16,000.

"The Interrupted Reading," by Badouin, fetched $19,400.

Two landscapes by Louis G. Moreau, "The Donkey" and "The River and the Park," realized $10,200. "Young Woman Arranging Flowers in a Vase," by Claude Hoin, fetched $4,840.

Among the Fragonards "Reverence" and "The Beggar's Dream" fetched $14,200 and $14,220 respectively, and "The Happy Family," $10,200.

The Portrait of Mme. Dufresne by Prudhon, brought $6,240. "The Jet of Water" by Hubert Robert, fetched $6,600.

"Le Cours du Chimiste Sage a la Monnaie" by de Saint Aubin, fetched $6,040.

Works by Watteau realized high prices. One sheet containing a study of two women fetched $14,200, and another with a study of seven heads also brought $14,200; a study of two children was sold for $8,020; a study of three women for $8,800, and "Le Pelerin" brought $6,900.

There was record bidding when Maurice Quentin La Tour's pastel portrait of Duval de L'Epinoy was put up. The picture was eventually sold to Baron Henri de Rothschild for $120,000, the highest price ever paid for a pastel and double the figure that had been placed upon it by experts. The Chevalier de Jars, another pastel, by La Tour, realized $22,000. His portrait of Mme. Grimod de la Reyniére brought $19,000, and his portrait of Marguerite le Comte brought $2,020.

Pastels by Perronneau were also much in demand. The portrait of Abraham Van Robais fetched $17,400, and the portrait of the Comte de Bartard brought $21,420. Two portraits, of a young woman and of a child, brought $15,000 and $15,040 respectively.

MORE BELGIAN RIOTS.

Socialist Leaders Beg Followers to Refrain from Violence.

BRUSSELS, June 5.—The Council of the Labor Party to-day decided against an immediate general strike, in spite of protests by the Walloon delegates, reserving such action for next month, should the Government refuse to consider the measure for the revision of the Constitution which Socialist deputies have introduced in the Chamber.

The Socialist and Liberal parties have issued an urgent appeal to their followers to refrain from violence and to devote their energies to obtaining the abolition of the plural vote by Parliamentary methods. These appeals, however, have had no effect in the Walloon provinces, where the strikes are spreading.

Acts of violence are of hourly occurrence, notwithstanding the energetic actions of the authorities.

In Brussels rioting was resumed to-night. The scenes of yesterday were repeated. As fast as the police scattered the mob at one place it re-formed at another. Many persons were hurt. There were frequent clashes, both sides employing great violence. Several of the police were wounded by bullets.

BIG PRICES AT HUTH SALE.

Dispersal of the Second Part of the Great Library Is Begun at Sotheby's.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, June 5.—The sale of Part II. of the great library collected by Henry Huth and his son, Alfred H. Huth, was begun at Sotheby's to-day.

"La historia del rey Canamor," small quarto, printed at Seville in 1543, by Dominico de Robertis, brought $250. It is an edition which appears to be entirely undescribed by bibliographers. This copy is in a crimson morocco binding by F. Bedford.

"The Tragedie of Marian the Faire Queene of Jewry," by Lady Elizabeth Carew, original edition, London, 1613, sold for $280. It is extremely rare. This copy belonged to Bright, Holgate and Corser. Shakespeare refers to this play in "Troilus and Cressida."

The "Hystoria del Emperador Carlo Magno y delos doze pares de Francia," undated, but printed at Seville in 1521, was knocked down for $425. This edition appears to be entirely unknown to bibliographers and precedes any hitherto described by four years. The edition of 1528 gives the name of the author or compiler of this romance as Nicolas de Piamonte.

"A Caveat for the Queene wherein is described dyvers Deceypte used towards hur Highnesse by her Majesties Officers," &c., by Richard Carmarden, a manuscript of sixty pages on vellum in the original vellum binding, with the arms of Queen Elizabeth and her cipher on the sides, brought $1,175. It is dated London, Sept. 12, 1572, and is secret information to the Queen, which the author begs her to communicate to no one else, lest his life should be in danger. It is probably the only extant copy of a document important for the history of English finance and polity in Elizabeth's time.

The "Obras" of Bartolome de las Casas, a complete set of the first editions of Las Casas Tracts on the Indians, Seville, 1552-3, bound in one volume by F. Bedford, sold for $240.

"A Shorte and Briefe Narration of the Two Navigations and Discoveries to the Northwest Partes called Newe Fraunce," the first edition of John Florio's translation from the Italian of the Voyage of Jacques Cartier, brought $1,175. It is in a binding by W. Pratt. This volume was unknown to Herbert. It was printed in London in 1580.

A fine large copy of "Saint Marie Magdalen's Conversion," by "J. C." quarto, London, 1603, rebound by F. Bedford, sold for $575. It contains references to Shakespeare's "Troilus and Cressida," "King Richard III.," and the "Rape of Lucrece." It is extremely rare, if not unique.

"A Plaine Description of the Bermudas, now called Sommer Islands" (sic,) by "W. C.," quarto, London, 1613, went for $380. It is rebound by W. Pratt. It was in reference to this work that Malone printed his tract entitled an "Account of the incidente from which the title and part of Shakespeare's 'Tempest' was derived and its true date discovered."

John Capgrave's "Kalendre of the Newe Legende of Englande," small quarto, printed by Richard Pynson in London in 1506, brought $310. It is in a binding by F. Bedford. It seems to be the only copy of which there is any record.

Another session of the sale will be held to-morrow. The sale will be continued until June 14 inclusive.

WARSHIPS TO CUBA AFTER MARINES LAND

Squadron Sails from Key West, Following Troops to Aid Guantanamo Planters.

GOMEZ CAN'T PROTECT THEM

Has No Forces to Spare to Guard Foreign Plantations from Insurrectos—Army Ready to Intervene.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Plans for protection from marauding insurrectos by large American and foreign planters in Eastern Cuba, due to the inability of President Gomez to afford this aid, brought about the hurried landing today of 570 American marines at Caimanero, whence they proceeded by train to Guantanamo City.

Disquieting advices regarding the general situation reached the State Department immediately after it had been informed of this step, and after a conference between President Taft and Secretary Knox orders were issued to Admiral Osterhaus at Key West to send the fourth division of the Atlantic Fleet, consisting of the battleships Ohio, Missouri, Minnesota, and Mississippi, to Cuban waters. The squadron immediately left Key West.

All reports from Cuba within the last twenty-four hours have told of the most aggravating phases of the revolution, which has now become distinctly a race insurrection embracing negroes only.

While President Taft still hopes to be able to avoid intervention and afford the Cuban Government every possible opportunity to preserve order and put down the rebellion, the indications are growing stronger every day of the necessity of sending the army to the island and for the third time maintaining a prolonged occupation.

For the present the President will adhere to the policy of landing marines and sailors to protect American life and property. The procedure will be precisely as it would be in any other country where a state of revolution was in existence and Americans and their property were in danger. When intervention is necessary and unavoidable it will be undertaken under the provisions of the Platt amendment, and will be in due and proper order after a proclamation by the President.

Commander Kline, in command of the naval station at Guantanamo, telegraphed to-day that because of the increasing danger from marauding bands of negroes, and after failure to obtain adequate protection from the Cuban Government, representatives of all the leading foreign mining companies and plantations in the vicinity had asked for American aid. In compliance with these requests and under the orders given when the Prairie was sent to Guantanamo 450 marines were landed from Caimanera and at once proceeded to garrison the various properties and keep guard over them. Later 120 more marines were dispatched.

Reports coming from Commander Mitchell of the Paducah stated that the situation around Santiago was growing more critical.

Accordingly Secretary Meyer ordered this afternoon the Fourth Division of the Atlantic Fleet, under Rear Admiral Nathaniel P. Usher, to proceed to the southern coast of the island and place their contingent of marines at the command of Col. Karmany at Guantanamo. The battleships in the division—the Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, and Ohio—carry each 125 marines. Admiral Usher is left to act as his judgment suggests, but it is the present plan to station a battleship in the various large towns on the south coast of Cuba, with the idea that the crew of a thousand bluejackets will impress the negroes with the fact that the power of the United States is near by, and that further acts of lawlessness on their part will lead to their ultimate punishment. The sailors will be given liberal shore leave, so that the negroes as they come into the towns to get supplies may see them and carry back word to their associates that the forces of the "North Americanos" have arrived and are on the alert.

President Gomez is at his wit's end to make the small army meet the demands made upon it. The large American, British, Spanish, and French companies in the eastern end of the island have telegraphed Gomez asking him to send 100 regular troops for each of their mills and 50 for each of their fields. They insisted that these troops be sent to-day or great damage might be done to their properties within the next twenty-four hours. Gomez, after consultation with his Cabinet, found that this demand would require at least 1,250 of his best men for guard duty, and to furnish them for the protection of foreign properties in one single section would lead to other demands from other sections, and thus his effective army would be wiped out of existence and he would be helpless to pursue and overcome the insurgents. The Guantanamo Sugar Company has informed the State Department and also the Gomez Government that the insurgents have given notice that they intend to destroy several of the foreign estates near Guantanamo. It is the hope that the marines landed this afternoon may be able to afford protection in time.

The Spanish-American Iron Company reports that the manager received a letter to-day from a rebel leader who said he had 400 men and requested a meeting with the manager within a few miles of Cuero. The manager declined, and the rebel leader responded that he had orders from his superiors to destroy all property between Cuero and Juragua.

Daiquiri is reported from Santiago to have been quiet last night. Though the laborers are still returning, no attempt has been made to work. The reports from Sagua La Grande, on the north shore, 180 miles from Havana, were more reassuring to-day, but still there is expectation of an attack at any hour. The town of Olympia near there was burned yesterday.

Major-Gen. Wood, Chief of Staff of the Army, had a large number of callers to-day representing American interests in Cuba. He also received a number of telegrams from managers of properties in the Island. The news received by Gen. Wood was thus direct from the regions that are threatened by the insurrectos. All reports were that for the present there was order and quiet, but trouble was likely in the near future.

NOT ENOUGH SEAMEN FOR ALL LIFEBOATS

Sensational Statement Made at Titanic Inquiry by a Director of the White Star Line.

CREWS QUIT MUSTER DUTY

Three Instances on White Star Ships Cited—Ismay Again Questioned as to His Personal Conduct.

LONDON, June 5.—Several hundred women of the fashionable set leaned over the galleries in the armory where the Titanic inquiry is dragging out its weary length to hear the continuation to-day of J. Bruce Ismay's story of the wreck. They saw rather than heard, for the replies made by the President of the International Mercantile Marine Company were of the briefest nature, consisting for the most part of the terse words: "I don't know," or "That is outside of my province."

Just before Mr. Ismay left the stand there was a dramatic passage, when Sir Rufus Isaacs, the Attorney General, reverted to a point which, perhaps, has been the most discussed of any detail of the disaster—Mr. Ismay's personal conduct.

"You knew that you had not boats enough on the Titanic to accommodate all the passengers and crew?" asked Sir Rufus, leaning forward with his pincenez in his hand.

"I did," Mr. Ismay replied, without hesitation.

"So that if all the boats had left the ship there would still be persons on board?" pressed the Attorney General.

"Yes."

"When the last boat left the Titanic—the one in which you had a place—you must have known that a number of passengers were left on board?"

"I did."

"Where were these passengers when your boat left?"

"I can only assume that they had gone to the after part of the ship. I was really not thinking about that."

Harold A. Sanderson, a Director of the White Star Line, made the remarkable statement on the stand that if the inquiry resulted in a decision to formulate regulations requiring all steamship companies to man their boats efficiently with able-bodied seamen "those seamen do not exist in this country." Mr. Sanderson added the further information that "there would not be sufficient men qualified for the purpose."

He said that it would be impracticable for such a ship as the Titanic to carry boats to accommodate all persons. He thought that even in normal, fine weather the boats would be unseaworthy with sixty-five persons each; forty would be as many as each could safely carry. In rough weather it would often be impossible to launch the boats at all. Commanders were never ordered to make the passage within a certain time, continued the witness; sometimes they were told not to land until a certain time.

Mr. Sanderson said that the company was building life rafts—flat ones resting on tanks—with life lines, which might be stowed in nests. He thought that five seamen for each lifeboat would be sufficient.

When the question of musters was raised Mr. Sanderson made another sensational statement. "We have experienced great difficulty in carrying out musters," he said, "first, because we have so many passengers that many of the crew cannot be spared from their posts."

He went on to say that part of the crews of the various ships were so unwilling at times that they refused muster duty on the voyage. "I am speaking particularly of the firemen," explained the witness. "The first instance occurred on a voyage of the Oceanic to New York, when the firemen refused muster duty. Capt. Haddock logged the men for disobeying orders. There was such friction that the company modified the orders to permit muster at New York instead of during the voyage. There have been two other instances since."

The question whether the designer of the Titanic had provided for forty lifeboats caused a long discussion. When asked for the facts, Mr. Ismay responded: "I have no recollection."

Sir Robert Finlay, representing the White Star Line, said that the fact was that the Board of Trade was debating at the time the matter of requiring ships to carry more lifeboats. The White Star Company discussed a plan for meeting such a requirement. A detail was the question of davits which could launch four boats.

Thomas Scanlan, M. P., attorney for the Seamen's and Firemen's Union, declared that he had evidence from a confidential source that the designs for the Titanic provided for forty lifeboats, and that the company rejected them.

To the Heads of America's Big Corporations

Why Not Tell It Right?

WHY not present the other side of the Corporation question for a while?

The baited, hated American Corporation, assailed by every hungry demagogue, the football of every self seeking politician, is today doing the world's work and, in doing it, is bringing hundreds of millions of foreign gold to enrich the workers of America.

Why not tell something of this to the public, gentlemen, and TELL IT RIGHT?

Why not tell about the big, beneficent, important things your Corporation has done and is doing?

Wonders That Have Been Achieved

One of the best hated "trusts" in America has carried light, "the most blessed gift of Providence," direct from the prairies of Oklahoma, five thousand miles up the Yangtse Kiang to a swarming people, whose life, until then, had ended at dusk. Its gallant pioneers have penetrated the outermost corners of the earth, unflinching, uncomplaining, unyielding. In the fastnesses of the Himalayas, thousands of miles beyond the white man's civilization, the grateful coolies have built a monument, where he sleeps under a towering crag, to one of these pioneers who fell of smallpox while leading this great American invasion.

Another "trust" has brought meat to the underfed millions of Europe and thereby lengthened their lives and usefulness by half.

A third "trust" has made two blades of grass grow on a million farms throughout the world, and has abolished famine in a score of lands.

A fourth turned, over night, a dreary stretch of Indiana sandhills into one of the great steel centers of the earth, with a population of near a hundred thousand souls.

Why not say something about these things to the public, whose ears have been belabored by corporation abuse until they sing?

Why not tell of the great foreign trade built up; the great natural resources developed; the great enterprises planted in wilderness and desert; the great factories erected on barren plains; cities set on unpeople shores; vast lands made teeming and fertile; tremendous armies employed in remunerative labor; valleys spanned, chasms bridged and mountains pierced, to make highways for the vast commerce that would never have known life and being except for the big corporations?

Important for Corporations and Public

In the belief that a most important work is to be done here, both for the corporations and the public, the Leven Advertising Company of Chicago has secured the association of PAUL LATZKE for the organization of a department devoted to educational campaigns.

Mr. Latzke has long been know to the magazine public of America as the leading writer on the "romantic side of industry." His serial articles in the Saturday Evening Post, Everybody's, McClure's and other publications have made a unique place for him in the estimation of editors and readers alike. The first of Mr. Latzke's serials, "Carnegie and His Thirty Partners," published in the Saturday Evening Post nine years ago, attracted instant national attention.

The favorable impression made by this work was more than maintained in his subsequent serials, which included "Unknown Captains of Industry" (Saturday Evening Post), "Freaks and Fortunes of Advertising" (Saturday Evening Post), "James J. Hill, Builder of the Northwest" (Everybody's), "Plutocrats of Labor" (Saturday Evening Post), "Romances of Success" (Everybody's) and many others.

An important change has come in the relation of the people toward public questions and institutions. The public wants to know things more definitely these days—and to know them out in the open.

The same spirit, which has forced the presidential primaries and the forensic discussion of questions which, in the past, have never been permitted to get outside the four walls of the conference chamber, has inspired the public with a new taste to get at the bottom of those things which are offered it for thought and attention. It is no longer satisfied with brief allusions and chopped off generalities; it wants the real stories of things.

Facts in Graphic Form

The great business institution or combination which finds itself on the wrong side of public opinion, because its position and methods are misunderstood or have been misrepresented, will today find a ready reception for the facts, if they are presented in graphic, interesting, story form.

The public service corporation, battling for its rights against an ignorant or currupt political administration, will find the citizen on its side and success assured its plans, if it will go over the heads of the machine with a frank, honest, well written serial addressed to the people.

The railroad, which has great attractions for tourists and settlers, and which has opened up new country, has a great group of readers awaiting the appearance of an article, or articles, or book, put forth in story form, which will tell all about it.

The Public Will Follow

The article or articles which have behind them qualities for good, not generally understood, will find the magazine or newspaper reader of today in a frame of mind where he will carefully follow into the merits of any question, provided only these merits are clothed in a manner to make interesting reading. It is his power to present such facts in a manner to grip and hold the reader's interest that made Mr. Latzke's great success as a magazine writer. All this power he will bring to bear in the new field which the Leven Advertising Company now opens up.

The new department will deal wholly with campaigns for the education of the public, but it will deal with such campaigns only in the open. The matter appearing will be frankly advertising matter. We will consider no proposition that involves the misuse or surreptitious use of the reading matter columns of newspapers or magazines. In justice both to the publisher and reader, the people who have anything to say to the public should co-operate to suppress the evil influence of the old style "press agent" and the old style editor who hawks his reading columns and deceives his readers.

Spirit of the Day Breathes Frankness

The spirit of the day breathes openness and frankness, and that man who meets the public fairly and without concealment, in the open market place of the advertising columns, will find his matter more earnestly and carefully read by far than he who attempts to sneak disguised into public attention through the reading columns.

We shall be very glad to communicate with any concern that is interested in this new propaganda.

We are prepared to submit special plans to fit any proposition along the lines indicated, and will furnish full preliminary details on request. Appointments may be made by telephone, mail or telegraph. Address THE LEVEN ADVERTISING COMPANY, Chicago. Telephones: Randolph 4004; Automatic 42-762.

COLUMBIA SENDS OUT HER 1,779 GRADUATES

HIBBEN ON PROGRESSIVISM

Cheers for Football—A New Dormitory Announced—Gifts from Classes —The Alumni Parade.

The 158th annual commencement of Columbia University yesterday surpassed all previous celebrations on Morningside Heights. With 1,779 students receiving diplomas a new record for the number of students graduated was reached. The alumni from 1911 to 1862 were out in full force.

President Nicholas Murray Butler addressed the graduating students, speaking on "Success." His speech was a plea for sobriety, stability, and dignity of mind and conduct. Dr. Butler said in part:

President Butler on "Success."

"Another great army of men and women, filled, I am sure, with ambition and with hope, is about to march out through the gates of this university. Years of preparation, in some cases general, in others highly special and particular, lie behind. What does the future hold? Whither are we tending, what use, what application are we to make of it all? One word springs almost inevitably to the lips of ardent youth: 'My one wish is to be successful.' When life's race is run and the account is made up once for all, everything will be found to hang upon the meaning of this word 'success.' As each individual interprets the object of his ambition so will he mold his character. As each individual molds his character so will he leave a good or an evil repute behind or pass through life unnoticed and unmarked.

"That character which guides conduct to true success is a disciplined character. It is not fitful, or wayward, or blown about by every wind of doctrine, or moved by every change of circumstance. Discipline involves standards. The application of standards implies rules A disciplined character, therefore, is a character which has fixed standards leading to definite rules of conduct. Unless life and study in a university have taught this lesson, the university has failed in its high purpose. The pressure for training to enable one to earn a living is all well enough in its way, but those who have not learned how to live will be of no benefit to civilization, and of little value to themselves, simply because they have learned how to make a living."

Conferring the Degrees.

When Dean Emeritus Van Amringe rose to present the candidates for honorary degrees the seniors and alumni cheered him to the echo. Prof. John W. Burgess was unable on account of illness to be present at the exercises, and the degree of Doctor of Laws was therefore conferred upon him in absentia. When Chief Justice White was presented for the degree of Dotcor of Laws the audience rose to its feet and cheered him for several minutes. In conferring the honorary degrees President Butler said:

EDWARD DOUGLAS WHITE.—Successor to our own John Jay as Chief Justice of the United States, sitting worthily in the seat of John Marshall, guiding justice and doing it in great causes with a courage that is inflexible, with a learning that is profound, and with a patriotism that is built upon the everlasting rock of principle, I gladly admit you to the degree of Doctor of Laws.

OSCAR WILDER UNDERWOOD.—Representative in the Congress of the United States from the State of Alabama, Parliamentarian and publicist, with powers of leadership and of constructive statesmanship that are a delight to all good citizens and a new source of hope and confidence for the Nation, I gladly admit you to the degree of Doctor of Laws.

SCHUYLER SKAATS WHEELER—Skilful and wise in all that pertains to the science of electricity and its applications; constantly breaking out new paths of advance; loyal son of Columbia, I gladly admit you to the degree of Master of Science.

GEORGE WASHINGTON GOETHALS—Engineer and administrator; trusted by the Government of the United States with its reputation in the construction of the Panama Canal between the two oceans; achieving a success which raises that reputation still higher and forever connects with it your own personal fame, I gladly admit you to the degree of Doctor of Science in this University.

GEORGE HAVEN PUTNAM.—Brave soldier and good citizen; author as well as publisher; carrying on with zeal and high purpose the traditions of a publishing house of which New York and the Nation are deservedly proud; alert in the definition and defense of literary property, I gladly admit you to the degree of Doctor of Letters.

JOHN GRIER HIBBEN—President of Princeton University; richly endowed with those qualities of mind and character that best offer guidance and inspiration to a company of scholars and that make a university an instrument of service in a democracy as well as a treasure-house of scholarship, I glady admit you to the degree of Doctor of Letters.

PHILIP MERCER RHINELANDER—Bishop of Pennsylvania; adding learning to piety and wisdom to understanding; trusted counsellor and guide to all that touches the spiritual life, I glady admit you to the degree of Doctor of Sacred Theology.

JOHN WILLIAM BURGESS—Ruggles Professor of Political Science and Constitutional Law, Dean of the Faculties of Political Science, Philosophy, Pure Science and the Fine Arts; now about to put down heavy burdens that have been gladly and generously borne for forty years; a pillar of strength to this university and a master builder in its construction; most potent organizer and inspirer of the study of the political sciences in America; wise with the learning of history, philosophy and law; carrying with you into retirement the affectionate regard of thousands of grateful students, I glady admit you to the degree of Doctor of Laws.

After receiving gifts from the classes it was time for the Alumni luncheon and all hands, therefore, moved on to the Common. At least two thousand enthusiastic alumni broke bread at the luncheon. Seated at the guests' table were the recipients of the honorary degrees and a few of them were called upon to speak to the assembled alumni after every class from 1862 to 1912 had "spelled it out" for White, Underwood, Goethals, Hibben, Butler and "Van Am."

A dramatic incident occurred when one of the early classes "spelled it out" for Columbia with three "footballs" at the end. At once the masses of alumni were on their feet shouting their assent. And for five minutes they kept on shouting and beating a tattoo on the plates and glasses. The hubbub continued so long, and President Butler, who was the prime mover in abolishing football at Columbia, seemed to be so embarrassed that Dr. William A. Meikelham, '86, who acted as toastmaster, was forced to request that the alumni discontinue the demonstration.

Chief Justice White was most enthusiastically received as the first speaker, and he paid a sterling compliment to the graduating class, declaring that with such men being developed by the universities our institutions are made more secure of perpetuation.

Politics Uppermost.

Congressman Underwood discussed the difference between the so-called conservative and a Progressive. His view was that "we are all both conservative and radical. Let us progress," he declared, "within the laws of our country and within the Constitution of the United States. There are some who would change our Government from a representative form to a pure democracy." The pure democracy, Mr. Underwood described as "Government by petition," and he then proceeded to show how impossible such Government would be.

Col. Goethals's remarks were confined to an expression of thanks for the honor bestowed upon him, but President Hibben of Princeton, the next speaker, said a few very tart things about agitators. "Every man," said President Hibben, "should be a progressive, but the true progressive is one who at heart and in mind is a conservative. Conservatism is progress without loss of essential principles. The college men of to-day must learn to have a profound reverence of our institutions as an American people. There is no contrast between the voice of the people and the Nation's institutions. The institutions of a nation represent the voice of the people under hysterical or emotional perturbation. It is our destiny to move on to a great future," concluded Prof. Hibben, "but for God's sake let us take the past with us."

President Butler's annual résumé of the year's events at Columbia included some important announcements. A gift of $300,000 for a new dormitory was announced by Dr. Butler. The gift comes from Mrs. Frederick P. Furnald, and the new dormitory will be Furnald Hall, excavation for which will begin to-day. It will be a memorial to Mrs. Furnald's son, who was a member of the class of 1901.

Alumni Parade in Costume.

Following the alumni luncheon the costume parade of alumni was staged on South Field. A banner offered by the 1902 class was won by the class of 1909, who appeared as South Sea Islanders in a make-up which included even ivory nose rings. As man-eating savages 1907 were not far behind 1909, Walter Kelly, dressed as a missionary, was led to the slaughter by his cannibal classmates, and his throat must surely have been cut with a wicked-looking dike if the red-shirted firemen of 1903 and 1893 hadn't put the savages to flight.

A pretty lot of Highlanders were 1902, and their bagpipes tuned things up for the "kilties." In honor of the University of Pennsylvania, which met Columbia at baseball and incidentally gained a victory over the Blue and White, the Class of 1910 were made up as Quakers; 1900 were Yamma-Yamma girls; 1892 were Fifth Avenue dandies, and 1911 were pretty fair imitations of Greek charioteers.

Barnard alumnae held a luncheon and later a costume parade and alumnae supper. In the evening the annual alumni beefsteak dinner, with the usual good-natured rough-house, was presided over by Dean "Van Am." For the rest of the evening the alumni made merry with a vaudeville show furnished by the decennial Class of 1902, and then they ended the 158th commencement with the singing on the library steps.

N. Y. UNIVERSITY GIVES 600 DIPLOMAS

PRIZE AWARDS ANNOUNCED

Addresses Delivered by John Barrett and Chancellor Brown—Names of the Graduates.

At the eightieth annual commencement of New York University yesterday afternoon 600 candidates received diplomas from the new Chancellor, Elmer Ellsworth Brown. The exercises consisted of two parts, the morning exercises at 11 o'clock for the candidates from the College and School of Applied Science, and the afternoon exercises at 3 o'clock for the Collegiate Division, Graduate School, School of Pedagogy, Law School, Medical College, Veterinary College, and School of Commerce, Accounts and Finance.

An address was delivered to the graduates by John Barrett, Director General of the Pan-American Union. Mr. Barrett departed from the usual lines of a commencement address and told the graduates of the need for strong men as he saw it in his relations with the South American republics and in his experience in the Diplomatic Service.

Four candidates were presented by the Rev. Dr. George Alexander, President of the University Council, for honorary degrees. These were the Rev. John R. Mackay, pastor of the North Presbyterian Church of New York, and the Rev. Shepherd Knapp, pastor of the Central Congregational Church of Worcester, Mass., for the degree of Doctor of Divinity; Edward Everett McCall, Justice of the Supreme Court and an alumnus of the University Law School of the class of 1884, and Dr. Horace Grant Underwood of Seoul, Korea, for the degree of Doctor of Laws.

Chancellor Brown addressed the 500 odd graduates of the downtown schools and urged them to keep their relationship with the university when they went away from it.

"We are related to each other through intensely personal relationships. The university is to foster and invigorate our personal intercourse. Even those of you who have had to pursue your university studies in the intervals between exacting labors at some other occupation—you have not felt in the past and I nope you may not feel in the future that in our schools you have merely got what you have paid for and have merely paid for what you have got. The atmosphere in which you have studied and have taken your examinations is not the atmosphere of the world beyond college walls. Your instructors have been to you as teaching fathers or as comrades, in studies. They could not be indifferent to your personal lives. They have been, and they continue to be, sharers in your hopes and ambitions, friends of the spirit with you on the higher levels of your experience."

BOY KILLED IN RIOT WHICH WOMAN LEADS

Striking Laborers Attack Policemen in Newark When Arrests Are Attempted.

BULLETS AND ROCKS FLY

One Woman May Die; a Policeman and Five Others Seriously Injured —Invade Union Township.

In a strike riot, which was led by a woman, a high school boy was killed in Newark yesterday, a woman probably mortally injured, and six others, including a policeman, seriously hurt. The police made several arrests, among them women.

The boy who was killed was Albert Faulks, 16 years old, of 39 North Ninth Street, a student of the Central Commercial and Manual Training High School. He was shot through the head while mingling with the crowd of rioters in curiosity. He was picked up and hurried to the City Hospital, where he died.

The trouble occurred yesterday morning at Nesbitt and Nassau Streets. It was said by the police to have been started by Rose Marino, who led several other women to the Nesbitt Street bridge over the Lackawanna Railroad, where laborers were at work. All of the women, the police say, had their aprons filled with rocks and hurled them at the workmen.

While the policemen were trying to drive the women away, a crowd of several hundred excited Italian men and women surrounded them. The police were trying to take into custody Mrs. Marino and Mrs. Maria Moscotonio of 100 Nassau Street, whom they found with their aprons filled with rocks.

When the excited mob learned that these women were under arrest there was an immediate rush at the two policemen. Stones, sticks, and other missiles were hurled at them by men as well as the women. Then an attempt was made to rescue the prisoners.

Word of the trouble was telephoned to the Second Precinct Station by some one living in the neighborhood of the rioting. The seriousness of the situation was not made known to Desk Lieut. Sonick, who received the message, and only five reserve men were sent out in the automobile patrol.

While the police patrol was responding to the riot call, Joseph Valavano, 14 years old, of 78 Nassau Street, was run down at Sheffield and Nassau Streets. He was injured about the body and legs. He was sent to the City Hospital.

A driver of an automobile truck passing Orange and Nesbitt Street saw the danger of Policemen Widman and Hoben, who were being surrounded by the mob. He rushed his truck to the Second Precinct Station and informed Capt. John E. Brown of what was going on. All of the reserves started for the scene of the rioting. Word was also sent to other precincts for reinforcements.

When the police arrived a shot was fired by some one in the mob. This was immediately followed by a scattered volley of stones. Then the crowd began an assault on Hoben. Widman seized Hoben's club while the latter reached for his revolver. The next instant Hoben was struck on the head and fell. Widman then drew his revolver and fired into the mob.

After battling for nearly twenty minutes, during which time many shots were fired, the police succeeded in restoring some semblance of order. When the crowd had cleared away five persons were found lying on the pavement. All were hurried to the City Hospital in the police and private automobiles.

The injured, as reported by the police, are Mrs. Philamena D'Auria of 22 Aqueduct Alley, shot in the stomach; Corchina Carmina of 119 Canal Street, shot in the right side; James Gerramo of 130 Chapel Street, shot in the back; Joseph F. Kabis, 329 South Orange Avenue, shot through the right shoulder, and Joseph Penabetto of 9 Drift Street, cut on the head.

About 200 striking Italian laborers, the same gang which brutally attacked Chief of Police William Nolen of Kearny, N. J., with stones and fractured his skull on Monday, invaded Union Township yesterday afternoon, coming direct from their headquarters in Newark. They retreated when they found Chief of Police Michael McIntyre waiting for them. The Chief had detailed all his men and several extra men for duty. As soon as the gang reached Chauncey Avenue, where workmen are laying water pipes, the three Italian leaders tried to attack the workmen. The Chief and Policeman Thomas Landells, who were in ambush, suddenly jumped from hiding and faced the men and placed them under arrest, charging them with disorderly conduct. The other strikers scattered and retreated over the Avondale bridge. Chief of Police McIntyre, however, ordered all his men on duty to prepare for their possible return.

'BUS LINE TO EXTEND.

Asks Permission to Run In Madison, Park and Seventh Avenues.

Commissioner Eustis of the Public Service Commission held a hearing yesterday on the application of the Fifth Avenue Coach Company for a franchise to extend its routes along Park and Madison Avenues from Eighty-sixth to Twenty-third Street, and along Seventh Avenue from Fifty-seventh to Thirty-third Street. It already runs a line of motor 'buses up Fifth Avenue from Washington Square to Fifty-seventh Street, thence along Broadway to Seventy-second Street, and then along Riverside Drive to Grant's Tomb and 135th Street and Broadway. The company has also recently acquired a franchise for a branch line from Fifth Avenue to the Pennsylvania Station, by way of Thirty-third and Thirty-second Streets.

Robert W. Meade, President of the company, appeared in favor of the application, and spoke of the great advantages which the motor 'buses offered for those who wished to travel directly along these route, especially where there are no street cars. He offered to call witnesses to prove the benefit they would be to the public, and spoke of the amount of patronage which they had received along Fifth Avenue.

Commissioner Eustis wanted to knew whether the company had made any preparation for new omnibuses, and Mr. Meade said that they were prepared to buy twenty-five additional coaches at a cost of $5,000 each.

Chairman Willcox, who had come into the hearing, raised the point that the Fifth Avenue Coach Company has franchises in the upper part of the city, which it does not work satisfactorily. He declared that on some routes the company only ran one coach a day to preserve the franchise, and he asked if the Commission could be assured that these extended franchises were sought with a bona-fide desire to fulfill them, and not merely to prevent some other company being formed to compete with the present one.

Mr. Meade assured the Chairman that the Fifth Avenue Coach Company had every intention of putting on a proper service if these franchises were awarded to it, and he declared that the only reason why some parts of the present routes had been neglected was that at present they were not in a condition to support a fuller service.

Chairman Willcox also wished to know whether the company was independent, or whether it was under the control of another corporation. Mr. Meade admitted that the New York Transportation Company has the stock control of the Fifth Avenue Coach Company. It is also understood that the New York Transportation Company is a subsidiary of the New York Railways Company.

The hearing was adjourned to June 12, when some opposition is likely to develop from the residents and the property owners' associations along the routes which have been asked for, on the ground that motor omnibus traffic causes inconvenience and increases the congestion of the streets.

BRIGHTON SAVED FROM FIRE.

Ocean Hotel and Shacks Ablaze When Wind Shifts Favorably.

A sudden shift in the wind, which twisted from south to north, probably saved a large part of Brighton Beach from destruction by fire early yesterday morning. A blaze started in some defective electric wiring in a photograph shack on the Boardwalk, near the Parkway Baths, and a brisk south wind sent it spreading to a two-story frame shack used as a restaurant and soda stand by Leonard Potula, a similar building adjoining it, and the Ocean Hotel.

Chief Lally sent in three alarms, and it looked as though even more men and apparatus would be needed to keep the flames from spreading over the whole district. Then the wind came around. The fire was driven back on to the Boardwalk, of which it burned up about seventy-five feet, and little by little the firemen quenched the blaze still burning in the shacks and the hotel which the fire had previously reached.

The fire created excitement among the owners of concessions. They dragged everything that was portable from their shacks and piled things up in readiness to be carted away. In almost every building there were caretakers asleep, after a hard day's work, and policemen ran from place to place arousing these sleepers.

It was Thomas Quigley, a watchman, who discovered the blaze and who gave the alarm. Then he and employes of the Parkway Baths brought fire extinguishers and played them on the blaze. The fire had too good headway, however, and the extinguishers proved ineffectual. Even the dozen streams of water which Chief Lally got on the blaze almost immediately seemed to make no impression until the wind changed and sided the firemen.

The Ocean Hotel was only slightly scorched, but two of the two-story shacks were destroyed and another damaged. The loss was not great.

The fire will not interfere with the three days' fête to be given at the Ocean Hotel, to-day, to-morrow and Saturday for the benefit of the Summer Home for Helpless, Crippled Children, according to an announcement made yesterday by Mrs. Harrison Gray Lamsom, President of the home.

BRANDT IN CLINTON PRISON.

Not Eligible for Parole Until April, 1922.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 5.—Foulke E. Brandt, former valet to Mortimer L. Schiff, resumed his thirty-year sentence for burglary at Clinton Prison this morning. It was said at the State Prison Department that he had been assigned to work in the office of the Superintendent of Industry. He was formerly employed in the Administration Office Building.

Unless sooner released by order of the courts, Brandt will be eligible for parole in April, 1922.

Hocking Valley Railroad Man Had 3,100 Shares of Its Stock.

Ralph W. Hickox, First Vice President of the Hocking Valley Railroad Company, who died at Lyons, France, March 25, 1910, left an estate valued at $474,417.44, all in personalty, according to the appraisal filed yesterday in the Transfer Tax Office of the Surrogates' Court, by Deputy State Controller, Wallace S. Fraser. Mr. Hickox succumbed to a stroke of apoplexy while making a trip in an automobile from Paris to Monte Carlo. He was a member of the University, Union, Union League, Metropolitan, New York Athletic and Apawamis Clubs.

His interest in the Hocking Valley Company consisted of 3,100 shares of the preferred stock, worth $310,000. His other securities included, 600 shares of the Chicago Telephone Company, worth $78,300, and 62 bonds of the Sunday Creek Company, worth $39,680. He owned a one-fourth interest in the Hickox Building in Cleveland, Ohio, worth $150,000, and some other properties there.

According to the terms of the will Annie S. Hickox, his wife, receives $223,706, and a life interest in the entire estate; Frank F. and Charles G. Hickox, his brothers, $4,086 each.

The Greatest Stearns Year

¶ This is the greatest year in the history of The F. B. Stearns Company. Since the adoption of the Knight type motor, Stearns sales have increased by leaps and bounds. In New York the Stearns-Knight has made a record approached by very few cars.

¶ It is the choice of the most discriminating buyers—for New York is the most critical market in the world.

¶ In less than a year the Stearns-Knight has made a new record for popularity. It is the choice of such men as Jacob H. Schiff, A. Holland Forbes, H. H. Rogers, Jr., Charles G. Gates, W. A. Harriman, Cyril F. Dos Passos, H. Van Rensselaer Kennedy and hundreds of others.

¶ The judgment of such men in matters of this kind is final. Like the owners of Knight-motored cars in Europe, they have the whole world from which to pick and choose.

¶ The judgment of these men means much to every motorist. But judge this car for yourself—ride in it—subject it to tests that before the advent of the Stearns-Knight had never been attempted.

¶ Take the time to investigate. The new spring series cars are here. Like all Stearns cars, they embrace the latest up-to-the-minute features.

¶ A few of the new models may be had for immediate delivery.

Time of game—Two hours and fifteen minutes.

The Giant juggernaut crashed into the Cincinnati Reds at the Polo Grounds yesterday and put Hank O'Day's team in fine condition for the ambulance. The story of what happened ought to go under the obituary notices. The shock was so great to old man Hank that he'll probably have to go to Carlsbad to recover. If he ever dreamed that his début as a major league manager in New York was going to be a hippodrome for McGraw's Giants he never would have tossed up his job as umpire. The Giant parade started at 4 o'clock sharp and it took two hours and fifteen minutes for the tally pageant to pass the home plate.

The result looks more like a quotation from the stock market than it does like a baseball score. The Giants scored 22 runs and the Cincinnatis 10. It was a test of endurance and the New Yorks showed that they were the best little endurers on the meadow. Nothing like it has happened since the night of the Big Wind.

One reason for the earthquake was that the Reds sent into the box three pitchers who had twirling wings that dangled like hemp rope. Fromme lasted one inning, Keefe the same, and Sambo Fletcher, formerly of the Reading team of the dyspeptic United States League, lobbed the ball at the Giant swingers until some one went out and told him to stop because the game was over.

The artillery attack of the Giants would have penterated six-inch armor plate. Fletcher made a home-run, Devore, Doyle, and Crandall three-baggers, and Snodgrass, Doyle, Becker, and Crandall two-base smashes. Great batting practice for the next world's series.

More than 10,000 people sat in at the wake of what was once Redland's pennant hope. And a good time was had by all. The victory thirst of the Giants is being reflected in the Polo Grounds crowds. They want the Giants to win all the time, and pile up the runs they can. Everybody got their money's worth yesterday.

The Giants weren't satisfied to crack the fences, uproot the out gardens, and scorch the green turf with blazing hits, but Herzog hopped one in front of Egan, Cincinnati second baseman, in the sixth inning and broke Mr. Egan's nose. The only other mishap was that Chief Meyers didn't get a hit.

And where was Hank O'Day? He hid himself and stayed hid. Cramped in one corner of the players' bench he sat silently and prayed. In his hand he held an old clipping of the National League standing showing Cincinnati in the lead. He thinks it must have been a misprint. Hank wore a blue serge suit, and a mouse-gray flat lid, and a scowl that would boil eggs. If any of the Cincinnati pitchers can get up speed enough to break a pane of glass, Hank will pay all the damages.

A few of the many things that transpired were: Josh Devore greeted Fromme with a three bagger to center. Doyle scored him with a safe smack and Snodgrass strolled. Singles by Murray and Becker and an out gave the Giants three runs for a starter. Cincinnati got two of them back in the second inning on Mitchell's single, a pass to Egan, and Esmond's double.

Fromme pitched one ball to Crandall in the Giants half of the second inning and Otis whanged it to centre for two bases. Good night Fromme. Keefe now pitching. He passed Devore to begin with.

Everything he dished up was stabbed and bruised beyond recognition. When that second inning ended New York had five more runs, and a few fans conceded victory to New York and went home. Manager O'Day called Brownie Burke, the Reds' mascot, and said: "For heaven's sake run over and tell that new pitcher from the United States League, Sam Fletcher, that here's a chance for him to make a reputation for himself. Tell him to go to and beat this Giant crowd just as bad as he wants to. Tell him to show no mercy."

Fletcher was slammed for four hits, one a three-bagger by Crandall, and New York absorbed four more runs.

It was so easy for the Giants that they began to make foolish errors in the fourth and kept up the habit. Devore muffed Mitchell's fly and Larry Doyle foozled a grasser from Esmond's bat. With the aid of a hit by Fletcher the Reds got two runs out of it.

Cincinnati dared to get a couple more in the seventh on two singles, one of which Larry Doyle kicked against the right field wall for a three-bagger. He thought he was playing football. Just for that, New York resumed the bombardment again in the seventh and had Sam Fletcher capped the climax of this round when he cracked a home run to deep right, sending in a run ahead of him. Just before that Hartley banged a two-bagger to left, with the bases full, and pushed over three perfectly good runs. There were seven runs in that inning and two more in the eighth, and if you have a good adding machine you'll find that the total is 22. Cincinnati rapped Crandall quite freely in the last two innings and annexed four more runs.

Interesting game, don't you think?

NOTES OF GIANTS' PASTIMING.

The only opposition that has made any showing against the 1912 McGraw model of the Giants is the rain.

The final score of the game in Brooklyn was flashed on the score board just as the Giants and Reds were playing the fourth inning. No cold dinners in Brooklyn.

Robertson, the Giants' new college pitcher from the South, got a chance at first base in the ninth inning. He is a southpaw.

It will be a novelty to see the Giants go through a game with nine men. Thus far McGraw's system of constant changes works great.

Doyle had 5 hits and 4 runs. Also 4 errors and a sore arm. Watch him when he gets well.

Reward offered for the one who solves the mystery of how Cincinnati ever led the National League.

Well, Hank was a good umpire, anyway.

The Giants are giving the old batting averages an awful battle this week.

How would you like to have New York in the pool this week?

SUPERBAS CHECK CUBS.

Moran's Texas Leaguer in Ninth Inning Wins for Home Team.

After all the other teams in the National League finished kicking Brooklyn around, the Superbas arose in their might and did the same trick to the Chicago Cubs. Last year the Superbas were credited with putting the Cubs out of the pennant chase and they showed the same magic spell at Washington Park yesterday, when Chance's crew opened a series of four games with the Dahlenites. A little Texas Leaguer by Moran with two out in the ninth inning pusned Bert Tooley across the dish with the run which broke up the game. The score was 4 to 3.

The game was full of blasted hopes for the home rooters, none of the blasts being furnished by Heinie Zimmerman, the present clouting king of major leaguedom. In the second inning with Brooklyn, runners on second and third bases, and none out, Heinie grabbed a sizzling grounder from Tooley's bat and held the runners on the sacks while he threw the batsman out. The side was then retired without a run.

In the fourth inning the Superbas filled the corners with none out on two hits and a pass, and Heinie grabbed two more grounders and threw runners out at the plate. Then Reulbach fanned Rucker for the third out. But the worst was yet to come. With two out in Chicago's half of the eighth inning, and Brooklyn holding a one-run lead, Heinie smote one of Nap Rucker's floaters into the spaghetti belt beyond the right field fence and tied up the score. Heinie surely did his part to down the natives, but his mates could not follow the pace. The score:

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 5.—The New York Yankees never had a chance to-day against Krum Kahler, who was well supported, and were easily shut out, the Naps winning 7 to 0. Kahler allowed six hits, and after the fifth inning not a man saw first, the side being retired one, two, three in each inning.

Jack Quinn, who started for the visitors, was no puzzle, and his support was full of holes. Sweeney was not up to last season's form, and the Naps made him look like a Class X player when they got on the bases. The only redeeming feature from a New York standpoint was the work of Carl Thompson, former University of Georgia pitcher, who succeeded to the Quinn heritage in the fifth inning. In the four innings he worked he allowed only two singles, Lajoie and Ball getting these, and struck out four men. The base on balls he gave to Jackson did not hurt, as Joe took a long chance and was caught trying to steal just before Lajoie got his line drive.

The Yanks had only two chances to score, there being only two innings when Kahler allowed them to gather a brace of hits. Their best chance came at the start when after Daniels had fanned, Hartzell singled and Cree doubled to the right field wall. But Zinn, a heavy hitter, struck out, and Birmingham gathered in Gardner's long fly. In the third inning Hartzell got a double sandwiched between two strikeouts. In the fourth Gardner singled, but no one could aid him. In the fifth Sweeney started with a single, and McConnell, who was sent up to bat for Quinn, lifted a Texas Leaguer over short. But Daniels filed to Birmingham and Hartzell hit to Ball, who got Martin (McConnell's runner) at second and Hartzell at Lajoie's station. In each of the other innings the Yanks went out as fast as they came to bat.

In the meantime the Naps played some real baseball. In the first inning they garnered three runs in this manner: Graney was safe when Chase muffed Stump's throw. On the hit and run play Olson got a one-base hit to centre, and Graney went to third. After Sweeney muffed Jackson's foul, the General naturally connected for a triple to centre, scoring Graney and Olson. Lajoie gave Stump a hard assist. On Birmingham's bounder Jackson was out at the plate, Stump to Sweeney. Birmingham stole second and continued on to third on Sweeney's high throw. Easterly walked, and the Naps then worked their famous delayed double steal, Easterly allowing himself got pocketed between first and second base just long enough for Birmingham to beat Stump's throw to the plate. Ted then walked to second. Stump's fourth assist of the inning came when he threw out Peckinpaugh.

Another run came in the third when Jackson singled and stole and came home on Lajoie's single. In the fourth Quinn made the mistake of passing Joe Jackson to get a chance at Lajoie. After Ball had lined to Cree, Kahler singled and Graney walked. Olson forced Kahler and he and Graney worked a double steal, Quinn's pitch being bad. Jackson was purposely passed, filling the bases. Lajoie sent a vicious single past Stump, scoring Graney and Olson, and Jackson registered when Zinn fumbled the ball. Larry was retired at second, Zinn, Quinn to Gardner. Thompson then went to the mound and the Naps got no more runs.

COLUMBIA NINE WABBLY.

Pennsylvania Administers Severe Beating to Morningside Collegians.

The cheers of over six thousand persons gathered on South Field yesterday afternoon at the annual Commencement Day game between Columbia and the University of Pennsylvania proved a futile avail in checking the onslaught of the Quakers, who administered a defeat of 15 to 2 to the Morningside Heights nine. Ulrich and Rothwell showed little strength and allowed between them sixteen hits, while the team behind them played conspicuously bad baseball. The local players fought hard all the way, but they seemed to be in worse form than earlier in the season. The score:

NEW YORK, THURSDAY, JUNE 6, 1912.

THE PROMISES OF 1908.

When the Republican Committee on Resolutions meets in Chicago next week, its members will doubtless cast a reflective glance at the long and wordy platform of four years ago, to determine to what promises then made and since fulfilled it will be safe to point with pride, and what declarations as to persons and policies it will be prudent to ignore. On the latter point much will depend upon the control of the convention and the composition of the committee. Rather more than a quarter of the platform of 1908 was devoted to the laudation of Mr. ROOSEVELT in terms that might, even now, bring a blush to his hardened cheek and which certainly will not be repeated should the friends of Mr. TAFT have a majority in the committee. Pretty nearly every title established for him, not merely to the respect of his fellow countrymen but to a high place in history, has been withdrawn publicly by his successor. And no one, we think, except possibly himself, would now be found to declare that "in no other period since National sov-"ereignty was won under WASHINGTON, "or preserved under LINCOLN, has "there been such mighty progress in "those ideals of government which "make for justice, equality, and fair "dealing among men as in his admin-"istration." If that kind of ludicrous over-praise is found in the next platform, it will be proof that it has been written, as the earlier one is reported to have been, by the gentleman who is its subject.

In the matter of promises the platform makers will have to do a lot of hard forgetting, whichever faction controls the committee. The only promises in 1908 that were of any importance as issues in the campaign were those relating to the trusts and to the tariff. So far as concerns the trusts, the friends of Mr. ROOSEVELT are agreed that Mr. TAFT has not lived up to his promises and they have made that the basis of the most ferocious attacks on his administration. If they control the committee they can hardly evade this declaration. But if they try to persuade the country that Mr. ROOSEVELT will do better, they face the fact that when he was in power he did not do nearly as well. On the other hand, if the friends of Mr. TAFT control, they will find the matter a thorny one because Mr. TAFT has lost quite as much of his popularity by the arbitrary course of his Attorney General as to prosecutions as he has by failure to meet the expectations of the radicals. They will probably make a fairly conservative utterance, for they cannot hope to outbid the Democrats on this question.

As to the tariff, neither element in the Republican convention can approach it without fear and trembling. Neither Mr. TAFT nor Mr. ROOSEVELT has a creditable record in this matter, though that of Mr. ROOSEVELT is by far the less creditable. He deliberately burked the issue during the seven years he was in office. In his term as substitute for Mr. MCKINLEY, his ignoring of the tariff had no perceptible motive save to secure a nomination for President, which it was then in the power of the extreme protectionists to give or to withhold. During his term as elected President he steadily subordinated tariff revision to matters that were of more interest to him personally, and thus amply repaid the tariff beneficiaries for the nomination which they had granted to him. Should he secure the nomination at Chicago, we may be sure that he would not forfeit such support as this class might be ready to give him.

The friends of Mr. TAFT will fall back on the scheme of the last platform, basing duties on the difference of cost at home and abroad, and to this will doubtless add a declaration of confidence in the work of the Tariff Board. But they will be embarrassed, or ought to be, by the fact that the Tariff Board's reports demonstrate that the difference of cost is a mere quicksand as a basis for tariff rates. And it will be hard for them to present any plausible excuse for the vetoes of Mr. TAFT, the only concrete contribution he has made to the revision to which he and his party are pledged. Still less can they make a decent case for him in his approval of the Payne-Aldrich bill. Taking the situation "by-and-large," as our Yankee phrase is, the lot of the gentlemen assigned to the job of patching up a Republican platform is not a happy one.

HOW CITIES GROW.

New York is not the only city where the suburbs are growing faster than the central section. Chicago's outer district grew twice as fast as New York's, or by 87 per cent., as compared with 45. Pittsburgh's suburbs increased by 49 per cent., and the Oakland district of San Francisco by 89. These figures, illustrate that the normal growth of a city is in concentric rings, like a tree. Other things being equal, a city will expand equally in all directions tributary to the central core, which is always the market district. But it is obvious that any unsuitability of building area or of traffic facilities will impede growth in one direction and unduly stimulate it in another direction. This has been the character of New York's abnormal growth, and the approaching increase of traffic accommodations will emphasize the tendency of population to correct this by spreading from the market centre, meaning Manhattan, so as to make the city more nearly round, or half round, since political reasons forbid any growth of New York in the districts where it must bear the name of New Jersey.

The growth of population in the outer districts measures their prosperity, but the loss of population in the central area also marks the growth of its prosperity. The night population of the "City" of London is counted by hundreds, and the day population by hundreds of thousands. It is so with our Wall Street district, and it tends to become so increasingly elsewhere in the proportion that trade displaces population. Subways are not the only factor in fostering this centrifugal tendency of population. The automobile is another. Many a man nowadays reckons the cost of an automobile in the cost of his farm or country seat, and calculates to gain enough in reducing the cost of his place to make his automobile a gift perhaps two or three times over as the wave of population grows up to the less accessible area. In all lands the cities are scattering with the betterment of the facilities of travel, and the tendency is in all respects wholesome.

HOW THE PEOPLE RULE.

Idealistic pictures are painted of the millennium to be attained by the direct rule of the people. At the same time current happenings compel a contrast of the truth with the fiction. We are to have all good things when we have the initiative, the referendum, and the recall. Our ills are economic, and the remedies are political, relating to forms or methods and not to substance. If we had all the political remedies in the world balance sheets would remain as stubborn as now. Men could not get more wages than they earned. It would no more be possible both to raise wages and reduce prices then than now, and the eight-hour day by law would remain incompatible with the increase of accessible good things which make wages worth earning. A war on profits in the interest of the wage earner is as absurd as to expect the results of addition from the processes of subtraction. The rule of the people will no more alter these facts and laws than it will alter any law of nature.

But there is no mystery about what the direct rule of the people will do or how it works. In many lands there are examples of the ends some of the people seek, and of the methods by which they seek them. The waiters' strike here and the dockers' strike in London are for the same object. In the name of the right to work they declare the right to forbid others to work without the license of those standing for human rights and uplift. In the assertion of these fundamental rights no restraint is acknowledged. If governments stand in the way they must be overthrown, perhaps peaceably, but certainly overthrown despite every protest by traitors to human rights and progress. The London lightermen assert an ancient charter right which is identical with the declarations of our own Federation of Labor, of the Brotherhood of Carpenters, and of other workmen, that nobody shall work against their will, that is, the will of the union. In support of this right they will shoot or club individuals, and will not hesitate to starve cities or overthrow institutions of whatever ancient prescription and fortification by the teachings of experience. In Budapest the schoolboys, utilizing the resources of civilization as efficiently as the Mollie Maguires or the McNamaras, oppose the soldiers who everywhere make their appearance when the people are asserting their rights. In Brussels it is the same as in London, or as some would make it in New York. There is no government in the world, monarchy or republic, which is free from the threat of revolution. Originally proclaimed as the means, it shortly becomes the end aimed at, and revolution for uplift assumes the aspect of revolution for the sake of revolution. To oppose revolution is to be reactionary and the enemy of the people.

It is fitting that this declaration of rule or ruin should be challenged here of all countries. Never ought our mails to be moved or our hospitals provisioned by permit only of those asserting rights superior to the rights of all. The needs of all are satisfied only by the labor of all, and never here can the organized minority succeed in asserting the claim that others shall not work without permission, which sacred cause was declared in Newark yesterday when the wives of strikers stoned workers. "We propose to make it a revolution," say TILLETT in London and ROOSEVELT in the United States. Down with the Constitution, away with the courts, reverse their decisions, recall the Judges. If that is anarchism, then LINCOLN was an Anarchist, says the interpreter of LINCOLN, in his manifesto declaring his intention to do something if the "bosses" dominate the convention.

The only novelty about this here is that it asserts for the rule of the people the same freedom from limitation of any sort that monarchs formerly asserted, and lost their contention. When the English people asserted their right to rule their monarchs they claimed for their Parliament the same unlimited right that they took from the monarchs. The consequence is that England is one of the most disturbed nations of the world in consequence of the unlimited right of her people to rule through their Parliament. Our theory is different. We thought, and embodied the thought in imperishable words, that there should be no unlimited rule, either of monarch, or legislature, or people. The people declared their will to be that their rule should be limited by the principles which they declared, and which the best century any nation ever enjoyed has approved. Our Constitution is the envy of mankind, and the pride of our people. It is their safeguard in all they possess, and their charter for the execution of all reforms which are humanly possible. No scrapper of the Constitution can be President of the United States, for it would not be the United States without the Constitution. It would be a different nation, and it is inconceivable that it should be a better one. No bond can be given to assure that the promiser of the millennium possesses the keys, or can or will unlock the gates of happiness. Prosperity cannot be voted, any more than a credit in a balance sheet. Progressives who promise reforms by ordering them at others' expense can only achieve disappointment and chaos. The right of the people to rule does not mean the right of the disorderly and discontented to rule. A headstrong leader of a headstrong people is a combination which needs constitutional restraints, and needs them the more that its restraints are irksome.

GOV. HARMON.

JUDSON HARMON comes into some prominence with the forty-eight delegates of Ohio instructed to vote for him as a unit at Baltimore so long as his name shall remain before the convention. The resolution points out that the action of this year's convention "fulfills the promise made without a "dissenting vote by our immediate "predecessors, the delegates who sat "in the Democratic State Convention "of 1910, and pledged the Democratic "Party of Ohio to 'indorse and present "'JUDSON HARMON for the Presidency "'in 1912.' This pledge was ratified by "the voters of this State by a majority "of over 100,000."

Even with the solid Ohio delegation added to the few delegates from other States who have been pledged to support him, Gov. HARMON is still very far, indeed, from the nomination. The point of chief significance is that the Democrats in his own State have given him, a sound and conservative but by no means reactionary Democrat, a vote of confidence. Ohio, lying between the East, where the voters of both parties are conservative, and the West, where the doctrines of the Progressives are rampant, raises its voice in favor of a wise conservatism at Baltimore.

This is the more significant because of the aggressive campaign waged in his own State against Gov. HARMON by Mr. BRYAN, the father of all the Progressives, and Gov. WILSON, a new and ardent convert to that faith. The Democrats of Ohio have listened to the preachers who are trying to persuade the people that the principles of the Constitution represent nothing but a wornout Bourbonism of no service in this day and to this generation. They had plenty of time to think the matter over, and they declare their continuing faith in the sufficiency of the Constitution as it is. The patent-medicine men have not swept them off their feet. It is of good augury for the decisions to be taken at Baltimore that the Ohio Democracy has taken this stand.

THE POISON OF MALARIA.

Usually the poisons secreted by microscopic germs cannot be produced without their aid in the chemist's laboratory. The announcement in The Journal of Experimental Medicine that Dr. WADE H. BROWN of the University of North Carolina has identified as hematin, which can be artificially produced, the pigment secreted by the parasite of malaria, is unique. Dr. BROWN extracted from the red blood corpuscles of the rabbit, the dog, and the ox, solutions of hematin which, when injected into the veins of a rabbit, were followed by the classical symptoms of ague, fever, and sweating, which have been observed for centuries in malarial patients. The advantage of being enabled to make pure extracts of the poison is that definite amounts may be injected into animals used for experimentation, affording an exact basis for the observance of symptoms and the study of the degrees of tolerance they acquire to its action. Not inconceivably, a specific more potent than quinine in destroying the infection, and more harmless to the patient, may be evolved as a result of such experiments.

Quinine and quicksilver are the only specifics for diseases discovered in the history of empirical medicine. That there may be more than one specific for a disease has been recently proved by Prof. EHRLICH, who has provided by deliberate experiment, and with sure prevision, a more efficient substitute for quicksilver in an important group of blood diseases. Quinine cured the Countess EL CINCHON in 1640. A killer of the malarial protozoa, less harmful to the human tissues than quinine and more deadly to their parasitic enemy, as dynamite is more destructive than spears and javelins, may now be perfected to supersede the remedy found by chance.

TESTS OF ALIENS' LITERACY.

The Dillingham bill is killed. Although but two votes were cast against it in the Senate, and the reading test was passed by a vote of fifty-seven Senators to eight opposing, the House Immigration Committee by a vote of seven to three has striken out all of its fifty-eight pages, and substituted therefor the Burnett bill, which applies a milder test of literacy for the admission of immigrants.

The literacy test is a makeshift. Senator DILLINGHAM tore his own bill to pieces when he admitted in the Senate last April that this test "as a "means of improving the quality of "immigration may be considered of "doubtful value." Prof. JENKS of Cornell University pointed out at Washington last December the real reason for its imposition when he said:

> The Immigration Commission pronounced the reading and writing test the "most feasible" of any single test, largely because it seems to be the one that is likely to be adopted by Congress. * * * It is extremely desirable that there be a positive check to immigration. This seemed the surest test as regards likelihood of Congressional action.

It is not alone because the present quality of immigrants is not good, or that it can be improved by an educational test, that it is to be imposed, but because a "positive check to immigration" is wanted, and Congress would be likely to pass it. In his speech before the Senate Mr. DILLINGHAM said:

> I do not think the educational test I am now advocating will help us a particle to keep out the criminal classes, because the criminal classes can read and write. They come from cities rather than from the country districts, and from all parts of Europe, and almost invariably are more or less educated.

He added:

> While many of the later immigrants are unskilled laborers, we have to say for them that they are the best of the class from which they come. It is the peasant class, but, as I said before, those coming are the ones who have thrift and courage and enterprise enough to assume the risk incident to such a journey and the making of homes in the New World. They know the law relating to their admission into this country; they study it carefully, and unless they think they are sure to be admitted they do not ordinarily incur the risk of coming. * * *

So, when we have looked at the question from all these standpoints, it seems evident that those who have come to us represent a strong physical type; that 95 per cent. of them are under forty-five years of age; and that they come here with a purpose. These are the encouraging features of this question.

This reduces the argument for the literacy test to the single reason frankly avowed by the Immigration Commission in its report:

> It is desirable in making the restriction that a sufficient number be debarred to produce a marked effect upon the present supply of unskilled labor.

It is labor union legislation that is embodied in the rejected Dillingham bill, and in the Burnett bill approved by the House Committee. There is an "oversupply" of unskilled labor, it is alleged, which should be kept out by a test that will exclude a gross percentage of immigration. But if there is an oversupply, it has not been reflected in a lowering of wages in any of the industries. Why cut off a large part of the present immigration which feeds these industries, without the purpose, implied or avowed, of improving its character?

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Bruce Ismay Among His Friends.

English critics of our Senatorial investigation of the Titanic disaster were particularly horrified by the lack of consideration with which so eminent a man as BRUCE ISMAY was treated, and they fiercely resented every question that showed or intimated doubts as to the propriety of his conduct on the night of the wreck. So indignant were they that when Mr. ISMAY went home he was welcomed with cheers as a man who, after a dreadful experience among ignorant savages, is congratulated on being again among friends who knew a hero when they saw one and could appreciate courage and virtue when those qualities were displayed.

Mr. ISMAY himself had no fault to find with his treatment in Washington, at least in his public utterances, a fact which may or may not have been due to his realization, unshared by fellow-countrymen who assume that everything American is wrong, that his experiences here, in comparison with what they might have been made by harsh and hostile inquisitors, were extremely, even amazingly, mild. After hearing or reading of the questions which Mr. ISMAY was compelled to answer when called to testify before Lord MERSEY, the angry and contemptuous critics of our Senatorial committee, if not entirely blinded by prejudice, will see a new light. Just possibly they may admit that what the representative of their greatest interest had to undergo here was as nothing compared with the rigorous questioning to which he has been subjected at home, and that, too, when before a board which was supposed to be something more than friendly.

Lord MERSEY did, indeed, come to Mr. ISMAY'S rescue more than once when he thought the Attorney General was pressing him too hard or unfairly, but this assistance did not prevent the extortion from the witness of admission after admission and statement after statement that left him very obviously in a position far worse than that in which he was placed by the much ridiculed and much denounced Senator from Michigan's imagined wilds. It was made clearly evident that there are Englishmen as well as Americans who think that Mr. ISMAY did not meet quite all the responsibilities of his position, who suspect him of having had something to do with the reckless speeding of the Titanic, and who wonder at his audacity in saying that high speed was proper on a night when obstacles ahead could be seen in time.

Leader in Outdoor Education.

Dr. MAXWELL, in well-justified desire that the New York public schools may not be deprived of any deserved credit for originating or promptly adopting improved educational methods, notifies us that we were in error when we stated yesterday that the first open-air school in this country was established in Providence. The first American school of that kind, he writes, was opened by our own Board of Education in connection with the Seaside Home for Children at Coney Island.

That was in 1904, the same year that saw the establishment of Europe's first open-air school in Charlottenburg, Prussia. The Coney Island school has been conducted ever since, in all kinds of weather, and with incalculable advantage to hundreds of tuberculous children. Dr. MAXWELL also says that in our public schools there are now several open-air classes for pupils suffering from that malady, as well as several for those who are only anemic, and he adds:

> The only limit to the extension of this work is put by the parsimony of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment in voting money for school supplies. During the school year now drawing to a close we should have opened several more classes of the kind had we had the money to supply the necessary warm clothing for cold weather and to install cooking apparatus.
> One of the interesting developments of this work is that in at least two schools some parents of normal children have petitioned to have their children taught all the year round in the open air.

Few Die Now Down in Panama.

What modern scientific sanitation has accomplished in Panama is an old story now, but it will bear repeating, and should be, less to make people realize what has been done there than to teach the big lesson of the isthmian achievement, which is that the same thing can be done anywhere by the same means, only more easily and more cheaply.

The last detailed monthly report from Col. GORGAS is for March, and it is a most wonderful showing, considering what Panama used to be. In that month, of the 13,108 white employés of the Canal Commission and the Panama Railroad, three died of disease and two of violence—a death rate of 2.75 or of 4.58, according to whether one figures from three or five. Taking in the 37,987 colored employés, the death rate for the whole force of 51,095 was 8.45 per 1,000. Including everybody in the Canal Zone, 159,514 persons, the rate was 14.67, while among the white men, women and children there from the United States, numbering 11,923, the deaths in March were just four—two children under 15 days old, one man of 45 carried off by appendicitis, and another of 42 by an organic disease of the heart.

Not only has yellow fever become an almost forgotten thing on the Isthmus, but with it have been almost as completely banished typhoid, diphtheria, malaria, measles, whooping cough, tuberculosis, small-pox and several other contagious diseases. This near-miracle has been wrought at an expense of just about $1,000 a day, made effective by the exercise of military discipline. That, however, gives little or no more authority than is possessed by any Board of Health with a disposition to use it and backed up by enlightened public sentiment.

In considering these figures they should, of course, be interpreted with due regard to the peculiar make-up of the canal force, largely composed of men in their prime, and it might be well if the reports made occasional mention of invalids on the returning steamers, some of whom die after they get home. The Panama death rate is not quite as good as it seems, therefore, but with all allowance for peculiar circumstances, its establishment and maintenance is in many ways a greater achievement than the completed canal will be, and that is saying not a little for it.

HEAD WAITER'S VIEW OF IT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am a head waiter, and I believe I am in the position to give you an unprejudiced account of the present trouble. There are two classes of waiters. One class devotes the best years of life in studying languages, human nature and cooking, which are necessary for a first-class waiter. The other class is composed of the lowest of all the other trades. To work in a first-rate hotel a man must be just as much trained as any mechanic.

The thing that interests the public most is the tipping question. While the hotel proprietors pay the waiters $25 a month, it was not because they did not want to pay them more; it was because the waiters seemed satisfied. They are willing to pay more to waiters, and they could pay more, so the waiters won't have to rely on tips, simply by raising the price of the food 15 per cent. They know the tipping system brought the standard of service in hotels higher than service in any other business. In no other business do the workmen strive to please you as in the hotel or restaurant business.

The earnings of the hotel proprietors are exaggerated as well as of the waiters. There are very few waiters that get rich in speculating in Wall Street or investing in real estate. People may think it was tips, but no waiter ever got rich on tips. As far as hotel and restaurant proprietors are concerned, after paying the highest prices to their department managers, while the price of food is going up, while they have to compete with larger corporations, owners are not getting as rich as some people make out.

The hitch in the present strike is the refusal to recognize the union. The waiters insist on that. The hotel proprietors, who always left it to the head waiters to hire the waiters, do not realize that the best thing for the hotel man to do is to recognize a union. I am in a position to know this, as I have hired waiters for the last six years and made a special study of it.

There are a few union men who are exaggerating things in newspapers by saying that they have to pay a head waiter for their jobs. This is not true of any first-class hotel, and it is only true in a few cheap places, where everybody, from the manager down, is a grafter. I don't believe that many such places exist to-day in New York.

This union in New York has shown that the members are composed of the best men in the business. Their members were working in the best hotels in New York. The hotel proprietors ought not only to recognize them, but help them along, for the union will be able to guarantee competent, sober and honest help.

GOV. WILSON'S FIRM GRIP.

His Strict Conduct at Trenton and National Leadership Praised.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A double charge has been persistently brought against Gov. Wilson:

1. He has been unfaithful to his duties through too frequent absence from the State.
2. During these absences he has been engaged in public speaking on political subjects, which is proof of undue eagerness for the Presidential nomination.

Will you permit it to be pointed out that critics touch here on one of the most creditable and striking aspects of Mr. Wilson's remarkable leadership?

The recent primary elections in many States point the moral in this matter. Illinois, for instance, was carried overwhelmingly against Mr. Wilson. Why? A Republican Progressive of that State, now supporting Mr. Roosevelt, explains. He remarked to the present writer that Gov. Wilson was the best candidate in the field from either party. But he was defeated in Illinois because practically no newspapers in the State supported him or told what he stood for. Meanwhile certain "yellow" newspapers were unwearied in their shameless campaign of slander.

Newspaper power immorally wielded is one of our most deep-seated evils. The honest newspaper does not reach all the readers of the dishonest one. At present there is but one resort for defense against this power. That resort is public speech. Mr. Wilson, from his very entrance on the political scene, has pointed to the crying need of publicity in government, of educating people, of opening the eyes of all to our real political situation.

If any one could point to a single slackness or neglect or duty in his conduct of affairs at Trenton or otherwise the charge would be true and grave. This has not been done. Notoriously his grip of affairs has been firm and unremitting.

He was urged to become a candidate. Now a candidacy is a responsible undertaking. Otherwise it has no excuse for existing. It means: "Here are my principles and I undertake so far as in me lies to carry them through." If it is seeking a post of honor it is the noble honor that goes with responsibility and danger. Away with all the undemocratic cant, the feminine coyness, the childish pretense that would keep the candidate from facing the people that they may so far at least know what he is and judge if this volunteer can be trusted with the post of danger.

Mr. Wilson's candidacy in particular is not a thing to be ashamed of. He stands forth as no other leader in either party to represent certain principles in their purity. I say "as no other leader" because he has a surer grasp of the principles, a greater power to present them, and because he has held singularly aloof from the vulgar personalities that have degraded the Republican contest. It is well known that his supporters have had comparatively small financial resources at their disposal, and we have Col. Watterson's word for it that Mr. Wilson refused what he was impolite enough to call "dirty money."

People say that there are other candidates who have not made long tours, &c. These other candidates, as is well known, do not equally possess the ability to present public questions to the people with clearness and power. To that ability in a democracy a special value and merit must always attach. When he has addressed audiences he has been asked to address them. Why should he refuse? Would it be true to his cause to do so? Is it too opulent, has it too many defenders? Which is the more American and wholesome way of making a candidacy felt; to sit at home and work through others with the aid of an ample campaign fund, or to face the voters, tell your convictions, answer questions, sow ideas throughout the country?

A CITIZEN.
New York, June 4, 1912.

GOV. DIX FOR PRESIDENT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The present Chief Executive of the Empire State is the most available candidate the Democratic Party can name for the highest office beneath the stars. I submit the following reasons:

First—He carried the State of New York in the year 1910 by a plurality of 67,401 votes. This is remarkable when it is remembered that Taft carried the State in the year 1908 by a plurality of 202,602 votes. If John A. Dix is nominated we are reasonably sure of carrying the pivotal State of New York next Fall. This statement cannot be made in connection with any other candidate.

Second—Gov. Dix has shown himself to be a thoroughgoing business man all through his administration.

Third—There has not been the slightest suggestion by any of his critics that his management of the affairs of the State has been otherwise than honest.

Fourth—He comes from a patriotic family. His father was a cousin of Gen. John A. Dix, who, while Governor of New York, uttered that famous sentence, "If any one hauls down the American flag, shoot him on the spot."

Fifth—Gov. Dix is in the prime of life.

Sixth—He has not been an applicant for the nomination, but has acted, as he has in all matters since he entered business life, as should a dignified, well-poised, level-headed gentleman.

A TRUE BLUE DEMOCRAT.

A REFORMER.

I met him back in '96; "Free silver!"
"No longer shall a cross of gold the people crucify!
How can the body politic be sound in
This monetary crime is eating out the Nation's heart!"

A few years passed—we met again; free silver was forgotten.
"The way we choose our Senators," he said, "is simply rotten!
free from fatal flaws,
Until the people's vote selects all those who make our laws!"

heard of something new;
"We must have the initiative—the referendum, too!
The country can't be saved," he said,
"by any other plan;
If you oppose these grand reforms, you're not an honest man!"

The other day we met once more; he
cried: "Here's something grand!
Recall of Judges—that's the way to make all wrongs come right;
you'd join us in this fight!"

Now should we meet a few months hence,
I wonder what will be
The nostrum my ingenious friend will recommend to me!
I find it difficult to guess; but this is safe to say—
It will not be the one that he's so keen about to-day!

ANOTHER APPEAL FOR FLOOD CASH

MISS GOULD GIVES $1,000

Her Second Gift and the Day's Other Contributions Bring Total Here to $24,617.

More than $1,500 was contributed yesterday to the Mayor's relief committee for the relief of the sufferers of the recent Mississippi floods. The committee sent out yesterday this appeal for funds to the citizens of New York:

To the Citizens of New York City:

The absorbing drama of the Titanic disaster and the contrasting lack of spectacular effect in the Mississippi floods have almost completely blunted the usual quick responsiveness of the American people to suffering and distress.

As a consequence of this apathy the Red Cross is facing an enormous work of rehabilitation with the smallest relief fund ever given to meet an emergency of such magnitude. New York's contribution to date is less than $25,000—only a fraction of that which has been subscribed to distant China.

Fifteen thousand square miles of productive farm lands in the Mississippi Valley are still under water, and thousands of people who rely on their crops and farm labor for their support must not only be fed and sheltered for many months, but must have seed for planting, cattle to replace those which have been swept away, and proper sanitary protection.

The splendid work of the army and of the local relief committees in the immediate task of feeding and sheltering the refugees has been of inestimable value; but the army is to be withdrawn shortly after June 1. The interval between that time and the harvesting of the devastated crops is one which is anticipated with the greatest dread.

The need is urgent. Your prompt and generous assistance will not only help the needy but will again make self-supporting those American farmers who own their own lands, but who have had their credit, as well as their means of livelihood, wiped out by a devastating flood.

For the Committee:
ROBERT W. de FOREST, Chairman.
ROBERT ADAMSON, Secretary.

Quick Aid Imperative.

Ernest P. Bicknell, the National Director of the American Red Cross, has sent the committee this letter, setting forth the conditions in the stricken section of the country:

"The time element is an important factor in the situation. If the flooded farmer is to raise a crop this year he must get his seed into the ground within the next two weeks for the crop of cotton, and within three weeks if it be corn or peas. The crop on which chief dependence is placed is cotton. If the farmer cannot get his seed into the ground in time to promise him a crop, he will in many hundred instances be compelled to abandon his farm and move to some other part of the country, where he can obtain day labor on plantations or in the lumber mills. While this will save his family from starvation, it will mean financial ruin and the loss of the little property which he has been able to accumulate.

"The farmers in the country from which the water has receded are back on their lands, struggling to regain a foothold. Such money as has been available for rehabilitation has been expended to date in helping these farmers return to their lands. The chief problem lies, however, in the State of Louisiana, which has suffered a heavier loss, probably, than all the other States combined. The waters are just now beginning to subside in Louisiana. The army is preparing to withdraw its men and discontinue its emergency relief operations within the next week or ten days. Following its withdrawal and coincident with the receding of the flood, the task of getting people back on their lands and setting them on their feet will fall wholly upon the shoulders of the Red Cross and the local committee. Some of the farmers will have to be carried until new crops are harvested next Fall. I should say that some relief will have to be provided until September or October.

"With a total of $200,000 I believe that the situation can be taken care of without discrediting the public generosity. This would mean that we would provide a minimum of seed for planting, a minimum assistance in the repair of buildings, and that we would be able to undertake to provide many things necessary to make our work complete and most effective. It is not possible to give an estimate of the demand which may arise for medical service, nursing and supplies. If the flood is followed by serious outbreaks of typhoid and malaria, the demands upon us may be extremely heavy. Health conditions at present are fair, but no one can predict with certainty the outcome. With the subsidence of the water the bodies of thousands of dead animals will be left scattered throughout the country, and there will be much danger of the corruption of the water supply.

"If we undertake to supply needy farmers with all the seed which they should have, and if we help them to purchase horses and mules necessary to enable them to carry on their farm work effectively, we shall be involved in a very much greater expense than the amount estimated above."

THIS FUND NEEDS $3,447.

Why It Wears Longer

No one now questions the superiority of Linen Mesh Underwear for health, comfort, etc. All physicians agree. Now, its construction is such as to add greatly to its wearing qualities.

Kneipp Linen Mesh Underwear

has an open weave which goes next to the body and gives the pores the air they demand to rid the body of its impurities. On the outside is a smoother weave, which is not worn by friction with the outer clothing. This double construction entirely prevents the rapid weakening of fabric unavoidable with an open outside weave. It is an exclusive feature of KNEIPP LINEN MESH UNDERWEAR.

Flat Weave Pure Linen Underwear is a popular priced Summer Underwear equal in style, finish and reliability to the famous Kneipp. It is cut to fit.

DUCHESS IS BETTER, BUT ALARM IS FELT

OPERATION MAY BE NEEDED

Princess Patricia Prepared to Take Up Her Residence at the Hospital in Which Her Mother Is Lying.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, June 5.—There are, in spite of a favorable bulletin to-night, grave reasons for stating that the condition of the Duchess of Connaught is such as to warrant anxiety.

The diagnosis of the physicians attending her Royal Highness proves that she is suffering from peritonitis, brought on by a sudden and sharp attack of appendicitis, and they will be unable to say for two or three days whether an operation will be necessary.

The members of the Vice Regal household do not conceal their apprehensions as to the character of the Duchess's illness. At the same time, the doctors do not take a hopeless view of the case.

The bulletin posted this morning at Lord Strathcona's house, where the Duke and Princess Patricia are staying, was as follows:

Her Royal Highness, the Duchess of Connaught, passed a comfortable night, having borne the journey well. Her condition this morning is satisfactory and does not give rise to undue anxiety.
A. E. GARROW, M. D.
W. W. CHIPMAN, M. D.
E. S. WORTHINGTON, M. D.

The following bulletin was posted this evening:

Her Royal Highness has passed a comfortable day, suffers less, and the symptoms which gave so much anxiety have improved materially during the last twelve hours.

Medical men here lay emphasis on the word "undue" in the morning bulletin, which, they say, indicated that the physicians were unwilling to make any definite statement. Indeed, they are not able to do so at present.

Princess Patricia has made all preparations to take up her post by her mother's side should developments warrant it, and an apartment adjoining that in which the Duchess lies is being prepared for her at the Royal Victoria Hospital.

It is not anticipated that any serious developments will occur in the next twenty-four hours, though every possible precaution has been taken in case an unforeseen contingency should suddenly arise.

The Duchess occupies a suite in Private Ward L of the Royal Victoria Hospital. It is one of the most beautifully situated wards in the hospital, being on the fourth floor at the northwestern angle of the building, giving a beautiful view. This and adjoining private wards in the west wing of the institution are ideally situated and have refreshing air from the mountain slopes.

One of the earliest visitors admitted to see the Duchess this morning was Sir Edward Cloustoun, who had placed his motor car at the disposal of the Duke of Connaught, he himself arrived and departed in a cab.

The lack of ambulances in the City of Quebec was emphasized in the departure of the Duchess. It had been decided that she should be conveyed from the Citadel in an ambulance, but when such a vehicle was sought it was found that the city and city hospitals did not possess a proper one. The city ambulance is out of date, and not equipped with rubber tires. Finally the Hotel Dieu Hospital at Levis had to be solicited, and loaned its ambulance.

LIBRETTO PRIZE CONDITIONS.

De Koven Opera Company Instructs Authors in Competition for $1,000.

The De Koven Opera Company announced yesterday the conditions governing the competition for the prize of $1,000 offered for the best libretto of light opera. Every person desiring to compete shall signify his intention by writing to the De Koven Opera Company, 1 East Forty-first Street, and will receive a card of admission, which must accompany the manuscript submitted. All manuscripts must be delivered to the offices of the company by Jan. 1, 1913.

The name of the author must not appear upon or be attached thereto; but a motto or other means of identification shall be affixed, and the name of the author and his address must be enclosed in a sealed envelope, bearing a corresponding mark to accompany the manuscript. Manuscripts of which the author does not control the sole rights for all countries, or manuscripts which have been set to music, will not be considered. In addition to the $1,000 the prize winner will receive the usual compensation in the way of royalties, but the company reserves the right in all countries to the libretto gaining the prize for a period of one year after the award and the right to name the composer. The company shall also have the rights to accept librettos other than the winner upon the terms of the competition except in the payment of the prize. The company agrees to pay the author, in addition to royalties, one-half of all money received from publication, mechanical or other rights. The decision will be announced by April 1, 1913.

O'NEILL NOT A BRIDEGROOM.

Judge Was Addressing Another Lawyer When Granting an Adjournment.

In a story published yesterday morning, Supreme Court Justice Platzek was quoted as addressing T. J. O'Neill, a lawyer in a case before him, as follows:

"When a man gets married he should have at least a week to enjoy his happiness without interruption."

The remarks were not addressed to Mr. O'Neill, who is a married man, but to William J. Coen, the opposing counsel, who asked that the case be put off for a week. Mr. O'Neill made the following statement yesterday:

"As I already have a wife and two fine sons, with whom I am living the simple, uncomplex and happy life, it is somewhat disconcerting to read in the daily papers that I am getting married again, and that Judge Platzek gave me a week to enjoy my honeymoon.

"All this morning I have been stopped on the street by acquaintances, who were amazed to read the article in question. I am the trial counsel in the case of Charles Clausen against the Connecticut Cab Co. and the plaintiff's attorney of record is William J. Coen, and he is the man who was married yesterday. It was on account of his marriage and not mine that Justice Platzek granted the adjournment."

ORPHANS' LAUGHTER FILLS CONEY ISLAND

HEAPS OF FUN AT LUNCHEON

Then the Little Ones Overrun Steeplechase Park—Orphans' Automobile Day a Splendid Success.

Four thousand orphans had a glorious time yesterday. It was the eighth annual Orphans' Day under the direction of the Orphans' Automobile Day Association and its President, Mrs. J. D. Smith. Everything smiled upon the occasion—the weather, the 4,000 orphans, and the spectators more joyously than any one else. It was such fun to see the kiddies have a good time.

And such a good time they had! There were 196 cars, 180 taxicabs, and 70 trucks packed full of them. They motored down Broadway, Fifth Avenue, under the Washington Arch, and through the Bowery to the Williamsburg Bridge, with no less a person than Police Commissioner Waldo himself escorting them with a squad of traffic police on motor cycles, Inspector McClusky in charge, clearing the way. Then they were turned over to the Brooklyn police, and away they went, bowling over the Brooklyn boulevards, down Ocean Parkway to Coney Island, every auto and truck looking like the home of the old woman who lived in a shoe—nothing to see but little heads all over it.

But the delights of the ride were nothing to those that awaited them at the island. They were the luncheon guests of Peter Doelger, the brewer, at Kaiser Garten Park, and after that Steeplechase Park was theirs for the afternoon. They not only could go in free, but they could do any of the jolly things to be done there, not once, but just as many times as they pleased.

Luncheon came first, however, and they were so hungry. There were innumerable little round tables, each with rolls, napkins, and spoons upon it, around which the children swarmed. Every little boy and girl carried a flag and wore a big Orphans' Day button, so that the teacher people who came along to take care of them could tell which was which and could send all the green buttons in one direction, the brown in another, and the blue still another way.

"Children, you can begin to eat your rolls immediately," said the pretty teacher of the Henrietta School of the Children's Aid Society on Sixty-third Street, to her charges, who were small colored children.

"Shall I eat it with a spoon?" asked little Lorana Dash, who is strong on manners, her kinky hair curling more closely with anxiety. It was not necessary at a picnic, she was told, and she seemed relieved.

There was a package of crispettes for each child, a special gift of Mrs. Smith each year, Mrs. L. M. Borden gave 150 pounds of chocolate, and there was an orange for every little orphan.

The procession to the island, which was arranged by Mrs. D. C. Stidham, acting secretary of the day, was a long and pretty one. Every car was decorated with flags and nearly every child had a paper horn, both the gifts of George Robertson, the racing car driver, who drove one of the cars. With the President, Mrs. Smith, in her own car, were Mrs. E. S. Chapin, Second Vice President of the Orphans' Association; Chester Campbell, President of the Orphans' Day of Boston, and Matthew P. Adams, superintendent of the Children's Aid Association.

Among the ladies assisting Mrs. Smith were Mrs. Zoheth Freeman, Mrs. E. F. Austin, Mrs. W. B. Martin, and Miss Dunlap. Albert C. Rau, assistant of the Boston Orphans' Day Association, was also present. W. J. Morgan, Vice President of the association was chief marshal, and was assisted by Charles Dieges and Col. K. C. Pardee.

All the cars, taxis and trucks were donated for the occasion. Three cars were sent by Vincent Astor. Mrs. Joan Newton Cuneo, the one woman who has driven a racing automobile, handled her own auto in the parade, and Neal Wayland, a racing man, also acted as a chauffeur.

JAPANESE TORTURE KOREAN CHRISTIANS

CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY

Japanese Assert That 100,000 Natives Were in a Plot to Assassinate Governor General Terauchi.

The Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions accuses the Japanese authorities in Korea of arresting and torturing native converts to Christianity on false charges of conspiring to murder Governor General Terauchi. Nolan R. Best, editor of The Continent, a Presbyterian newspaper, said yesterday that these outrages have been going on for more than a year, but that the Board of Missions kept quiet in the belief that it could adjust the trouble and get justice for the prisoners. Efforts in this direction having failed, it was determined to make the story public.

It is charged that the Japanese have arrested more than six thousand native Korean Christians and locked them up in the military prison at Seoul. Torturing was resorted to to extort confessions from some of the prisoners. Mr. Best said that advices have reached the Board of Missions from entirely trustworthy sources to the effect that the ingenuity of the Japanese has been taxed to devise methods for torturing the prisoners without inflicting permanent physical deformities or leaving scars.

One method of torture resorted to, Mr. Best said, was to hold hed-hot irons near enough to the cuticle to cause the keenest pain, but not near enough to sear it. Daily treatment of this sort sometimes served to break down the strongest set of nerves and produce "confessions" that seemed to satisfy the authorities and led to more arrests. Another favorite method of torturing the prisoners has been by the placing of pointed sticks under the chin so as to force the sufferer to stand on the tips of his toes.

Count Terauchi, according to Mr. Best, denied that any prisoners were tortured, but this denial is taken to mean only that the Japanese code, which prevents any punishment that breaks the skin, has been observed. This code also allows the Japanese, it was said, to jiu jitsu a prisoner to the extent of straining his sinews, bruising his muscles and otherwise inflicting poignant pain.

No complaint will lie with the American representative of this Government in Korea, or with the authorities at Washington, because all of the men said to be unjustly imprisoned are native Koreans. Finding that every quiet effort to obtain justice for the prisoners failed, Arthur J. Brown, Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Missions, wrote a letter to his Excellency Viscount Chinda, the Japanese Ambassador to this country, on May 31 last. Mr. Brown received a talk in his office with Nasanao Hanihara, Chargé d'Affaires of the Japanese Embassy, on March 16.

This talk and several communications which have passed between the Board and the Japanese representatives, increased rather than diminished the anxiety of the Board and the missionaries. In reference to the charges of torture Mr. Brown wrote to Viscount Chinda:

"The reports [of the torture] come from so many independent sources, and are apparently supported by so much corroborative testimony, that it is difficult to regard them as wholly set aside by the denial to the Governor-General of the subordinate officials who are immediately concerned."

Mr. Brown also called attention to the fact that the men arrested on the charge of conspiracy have not been tried and that no date has been set for their trial. There are 60,736 Koreans connected with the Presbyterian churches as communicants or adherents in the Syen Chyun and Pyeng Yang stations, and it was in these sections that the arrests were made.

Altogether it is alleged that about 6,000 persons, practically all Christians, have been arrested on the charge of conspiracy to murder Count Terauchi, and the Japanese are said to put forth the extravagant claim that 100,000 in all are implicated in the plot.

TRACING DARROW FUND.

$210,000 Received from Morrison of American Federation.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 5.—Clashes between counsel which resulted in fines for contempt of court and indications of Federal co-operation with the State in the case overshadowed the scant testimony heard to-day in the trial of Clarence S. Darrow for alleged jury bribing.

The name of Olaf A. Tveitmoe, the San Francisco labor leader, was also brought into the case although the connection of Tveitmoe was only that of an indorser of a $10,000 check sent by Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labor to Darrow, which was read into the record.

The check, which was cashed in San Francisco, was said by the prosecution to be one of the most important links in its case against Darrow, as it tended to prove that the currency received from this check was used as a fund for the corruption of McNamara jurors.

District Attorney Fredericks and Horace H. Appel, associate counsel for the defense, indulged in an acrimonious controversy, and were fined $25 and $5 respectively by Judge Hutton. A remark to Darrow by the District Attorney, who later designated it as a pleasantry, precipitated the clash.

A considerable portion of the day's session was devoted by the prosecution to reading into the record all of the checks sent to Darrow by Morrison. The aggregate amount of the checks was $210,000, all except one of which apparently was received by the then chief counsel for the McNamara defense. The exception was for $10,000, and it was drawn and subsequently canceled on Dec. 1, the day upon which the McNamara brothers pleaded guilty.

W. J. Ford, Assistant District Attorney, added that no attempt would be made by the prosecution to show that either President Samuel Gompers or Secretary Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labor had any guilty knowledge of the alleged corruption of jurors and witnesses in the McNamara case.

BONDS OVERSUBSCRIBED.

Allotments Under $170,000,000 Interboro Issue Will Be Pared Down.

With the closing of the books for the syndicate handling the forthcoming issue of $170,000,000 of Interborough Rapid Transit bonds yesterday it was announced that subscriptions somewhat in excess of the offering had been received by the managers, J. P. Morgan & Co. Part of the allotments asked for will be accordingly cut down. A considerable share of the bonds will go to foreign investors.

The actual award of the bonds will be held up to await the court decision as to the legality of the arrangement for preferential payments. As the lower court was unanimous in approving this provision, no setback is apprehended.

Advancing Another Steamship Suit.

Charles E. Pickett was appointed yesterday by Circuit Judges Lacombe, Coxe, Noyes, and Ward special examiner to take testimony in the suit brought by the Government against the Hamburg-American and other steamship companies for the dissolution of the North Atlantic Conference. The Government alleges that this is an illegal combination in restraint of trade and stifled competition by running "fighting steamers."

SEE CAPE COD CANAL.

Navigation Congress Delegates Taken on Inspection Tour by Belmont.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., June 5.—August Belmont entertained to-day 150 of the foreign delegates to last week's Twelfth International Navigation Congress at Philadelphia, on an inspection tour of the $12,000,000 ship canal which Mr. Belmont's Cape Cod Construction Company is building from Buzzard's Bay to Barnstable Bay across Cape Cod.

The canal, which will shorten the coastwise trip from New York to Boston by seventy miles and which will obviate the slow and dangerous crossing of the Nantucket Shoals, will, it is hoped, be completed next year. It is one of the largest pieces of navigation construction now proceeding in the United States."

The delegates left New York on Tuesday night with Mr. Belmont and the other officers of the company on the Fall River liner Commonwealth.

Special stateroom and dining room accommodations had been reserved for them, and after dinner on board there were speeches by J. W. Miller, Vice President of the canal company; Capt. W. H. Jaques, who brought the delegates greetings from the Governor of Massachusetts; the Mayor of Boston, and others.

Arriving at Fall River this morning, the delegates were taken on a special train to Buzzard's Bay, where the western end of the canal is located. The first thing the delegates saw when they stopped at Buzzard's Bay was the big black $300,000 "jack knife" bridge, which the canal company recently completed, across the bay at the entrance of the canal.

While Mr. Belmont pointed out to some of the delegates the enormous steam "dipper," which scoops ten yards of sand or mud at a time, William Barclay Parsons, Chief Engineer for the Canal, took others to the top of the bridge tower, made the giant structure "jack knife" for them, and showed how the enormous lifting power was applied. Boarding the train again, the party then travelled along the canal, which parallels the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad track most of its length.

The party stopped at the Sheryer highway bridge, by which the company has replaced the low bridge at Bourne, near where Mr Belmont dug the first spadeful of earth for the canal three years ago.

The next stop made was at Sagamore, where the delegates boarded tugs and steamed for three miles through the eastern end of the canal and out into Barnstable Bay. The breakwater, which guards the eastern outlet of the canal from the northeast winds, and which consists of 500,000 tons of granite, is already complete.

Lunch was served at Sandwich. After returning from the trip to the breakwater, the 150 delegates were taken by special train to Boston, where they exchanged the hospitalities of the canal company for those of the city authorities. They were the guests of the Chamber of Commerce at the Algonquin Club to-night. To-morrow they will have an excursion over Boston Harbor, and will be entertained by the Boston City Club.

Mr. Belmont said he expected to complete the canal by the Winter of 1913, and open it the following Spring.

President Steers Digs First Shovelful for $5,000,000 Building.

Borough President Steers of Brooklyn dug the first shovelful of earth, yesterday afternoon, for the foundation of the new central building of the Brooklyn Public Library system. The building when completed will have cost $5,000,000, and is the first of a cluster of edifices at the Prospect Park Plaza, which will make the entrance to the park the centre of education and art in the borough.

Mayor Gaynor in his speech praised the system of education throughout the United States, and said that as a nation the United States had progressed the fastest on educational lines. David A. Boody, President of the Board of Trustees of the Library, presided.

FIGHT AGAINST RECEIVER.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 5.—The majority stockholding interests in the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad met here to-day, and, fearing another clash with the "insurgent" or Ramsay stockholders, adjourned for another week without taking action for the election of Directors.

It is probable that the question of control will be thrashed out in the courts, together with the question as to whether or not the receivership of the road should be lifted. The Ramsay interests declare the road is on a paying basis, and that a receiver is no longer required.

SUES TO BREAK POOL OF LINES TO BRAZIL

Government Attacks German Companies, Prince Line, Lamport & Holt, and Others.

ASKS FOR AN INJUNCTION

And Refusal of Clearances at Any American Port While "Illegal Combination" Continues.

District Attorney Wise filed yesterday in the Federal District Court a suit in equity to declare illegal existing agreements between the steamship lines engaged in the trade betwen this country and Brazil and to enjoin any of the employes of the companies mentioned from granting any rebates or bonuses to shippers or otherwise conspiring to restrain the business of their rivals. The court is also asked to issue an injunction forbidding the defendants to enter into any conspiracy or contract which would tend to monopolize the foreign commerce of the United States and to prevent them from entering or clearing their ships at any American port if they continue to do so.

The defendants in this action are the Prince Line, Limited, and James Knott of Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, its manager; Paul S. Gerhard, Francis J. Zimmerman and Charles S. Gerhard, who as Paul S. Gerhard & Co. have been agents in this city for the Prince Line; Harry Connor, an employe of the same line; Walter Holland, George Melly, Arthur Cook, and C. Sydney Jones of Liverpool, England, the partners in the shipping firm of Lamport & Holt; Frederick T. Busk and Lorenzo Daniels, who as the firm of Busk & Daniels have been the New York agents of Lamport & Holt, and William Geln, one of their employes; the Hamburg-Amerikanische Packetfahrt Aktien-Geselischaft of Hamburg, Germany; the Hamburg Suderamerikanische Dampfschifffahrts-Gesellschaft of Hamburg, the Hamburg lines, which are owned by the two German corporations; William G. Sickel, New York manager of the Packetfahrt Atkien-Gesellschaft; Paul Gotthelf, Thomas A. Sparks, Wilhelm Voelkens, H. J. Voelkens, and W. L. Walter, who, as the firm of Funch, Edye & Co., have been the general agents in this country for the two Hamburg lines, and Robert H. Goodwin, Clement H. Betts and Henry H. Garvan, who are employes of Funch, Edye & Co.

The Government brings much the same charge against the Prince Line, Lamport & Holt, and the German lines as it brought two months ago against a number of steamship companies engaged in trade with the Far East. It alleges that they, instead af competing against each other for the Brazil trade, formed a pooling agreement by which the profits were divided and rebates were paid to shippers who gave their entire business to the pool, whereas those who occasionaly used the tramp steamers sometimes found that the freight they did offer the pool was refused.

CHURCH MAY MOVE NOW.

Fifth Avenue Baptist Church Site No Longer Protected by Rockefeller.

An important sale of Forty-fifth Street property, made yesterday by John D. Rockefeller, led to the rumor that the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church had practically decided upon a site for its long contemplated new structure. The property sold consists of three old dwellings at 7, 9, and 11 West Forty-fifth Street, directly behind the church in Forty-sixth Street. The property was acquired by Mr. Rockefeller three years ago to protect the rear of the church plot, when plans were being prepared for a new edifice on the old site.

Title to the Forty-fifth Street parcel, which has a width of forty-five feet, has been held in the name of the Abeyton Realty Company, of which Starr J. Murphy, who has charge of many of Mr. Rockefeller's charitable and educational interests, is President, and which has offices in the Standard Oil Building. The property was bought by a syndicate for $250,000, and it is said a twenty-story office and commercial structure will be erected.

Dr. A. R. McMichael of the Building Committee, which was appointed in November, 1910 to look for a new site for the church, said last night that so far as he knew no definite plot had been obtained. It was at first intended to erect a $500,000 building, and when these plans were abandoned the Rev. Dr. Charles F. Aked resigned the pastorate and went to San Francisco.

Quilt Machines Pay 30 Per Cent. Duty—Other Tariff Decisions.

The Board of United States General Appraisers, in sustaining a protest filed by J. W. Hampton, Jr., & Co., has decided that machines used in the sewing together of fabrics in the construction of quilts, fall within the specific provision in the Tariff of 1909 for "sewing machines." They were assessed as "manufactures of metal," with duty at the rate of 45 per cent., whereas the importers alleged that the duty should be 30 per cent. ad valorem. The Government contended that the term "sewing machines," as used in the law, refers only to the kind used ordinarily in the home. Judge Fischer, in his decision for the board, dissents from this view and upholds the importers' claim. The Collector is reversed.

The board declined to upset the classification of 2,000 pieces of pig iron imported by E. Hennigson. The merchandise was assessed for duty at 3-10 of 1 cent a pound under the present tariff law, as muck bars. The protestant claimed a rate of $2.50 per ton as iron in pigs. The Customs tribunal holds that the evidence offered does not show the exact character of the importation, and that the action of the classifying officer is presumptively correct. The Collector is affirmed.

Reiss & Brady convinced the board that the Collector at New York erred in exacting duty on paper wrappers used as covers for raisins. The authorities assessed duty on the wrappers as unusual coverings. This action the board declared illegal, as the coverings are usual, while the merchandise pays a specific tax. It is held that the coverings in question are non-dutiable as claimed. The Collector is reversed, with an order to reliquidate the entries.

Claims by the Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co., and others relating to linen damask were denied. The cloth weighs under 4½ ounces per square yard, and was claimed dutiable at the rate of 30 or 35 per cent. ad valorem under the provision in Paragraph 357, Act of 1909, for "plain woven fabrics." Duty was assessed at 45 per cent. under Paragraph 358. Judge Cooper finds no reason for disturbing the Collector's action. It was decided that various scalloped articles imported by F. B. Vandegrift & Co. must stand the assessed duty of 60 per cent. as being made by hand or machinery. Lower duty was claimed under the provision for flax articles. The Collector's decision stands.

COTTON DUCK EXPORTS UP.

Statistics compiled by the New York Custom House covering exports of domestics and cotton duck from this port for the week ending June 1 show a decline of 2,261 packages and $165,973 in value, compared with shipments of similar merchandise in the previous week. Exports for the week amounted to 5,907 packages, valued at $299,223. Notwithstanding the decrease shown by the foregoing figures, shipments of these goods recorded since Jan. 1, 1912, exceed those of the corresponding period in 1911 by 62,196 packages. The gain in the value of the merchandise forwarded is $2,816,335. The sharp decline in size and value of exports last week, however, reduced the present year's gain 3,085 packages, and $427,537 from the total shown by the figures for the week ended May 25.

Exports to the British East Indies, Aden, and the French possessions in Africa headed the list of the week's shipments, being valued at $69,055; $44,430, and $25,176, respectively. Total exports of this merchandise from the Port of New York recorded since the beginning of the current year aggregate 195,135 packages, valued at $12,752,721, against 132,939 packages valued at $9,936,386, forwarded during the same period in 1911.

Business in the local export market continues dull, while fairly numerous inquiries are reported by the principal houses, actual business booked is generally below normal levels. Shipments on old orders continue to go forward, but the decline shown by the customs figures during the last two or three weeks indicates that these contracts are gradually being completed. The lack of adequate protection afforded consignments of merchandise into the interior of China tends to keep trading dull in the Chinese markets, and the unsettled financial conditions prevailing there also keep the demand limited. English manufacturers are claimed to be winning a good part of the Chinese market away from American producers by offering heavily adulterated cottons at prices with which domestic manufacturers cannot compete. The Red Sea markets are apparently covered for some time, and little new business is reported to be coming forward. The Philippine markets are generally active, and Central and South American orders, though usually small, are being received in fair number.

LULL IN DRY GOODS MARKETS

Trading in All Lines Less Active Than at Week's Opening.

Buyers were less active in the New York dry goods markets yesterday, consequently the day's business as a whole was somewhat below Tuesday's levels. With the continuance of weather favorable to the rapid movement of seasonable merchandise from the shelves of retailers and the apparent activity of shoppers in the principal retail districts, wholesalers were generally at a loss to explain the limited activities of local buyers. A fair number of out-of-town buyers were in the market, but orders placed were rather small as a rule. The usual number of less important buyers were in evidence in the leading distributing centres, but in the majority of lines the aggregate amount of business placed by them was only fair.

There was a decided lull in wash goods activities. A well-defined call for job lots was in evidence in certain quarters, but as far as could be learned there were no concessions made to move stocks. White goods showed little change either way, but dress linens are said to be slowing up somewhat under recent advances. Spot buying of the heavier lines of Spring dress goods was nominal, but orders for Fall lines continue to come in in large number.

Silks generally showed retarded activity and ribbons also moved slowly. Laces were in excellent demand in the secondary markets, but embroideries were not overactive. Hosiery and underwear moved in a fair way, but no appreciable rush for them manifested itself.

REID EXPEOTS BRISK TRADE.

Crop Prospects Great — Rock Island Prospers—Ripley Optimistic, Too.

Daniel G. Reid, to whose operations a large part of the recent advance in the stock market was credited, particularly American and Lehigh Valley shares, returned yesterday from a trip through several states of the Middle West in a very cheerful frame of mind. Mr. Reid says that the agricultural conditions in Illinois, Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri and Kansas are far ahead of those obtaining a year ago and promise a big crop yield. He found wheat ripening fast in Kansas and preparations being made to begin harvesting in a couple of weeks. The corn crop likewise looks much better than it did a year ago.

Mr. Reid says that general business is on the mend and he found the Western bankers very hopeful. The railroads are doing a thriving business and gradually overcoming the losses suffered by the severe storms of the past Winter.

As for the Rock Island, whose lines he travelled over, the outlook is steadily improving, and he is confident that the company will have no trouble in earning its dividend this year. Only a small part of the road's mileage is in the flooded district. Beyond one piece of 100 miles of new construction as a part of the short line being built from Des Moines to Kansas City the Rock Island's capital expenditures are being limited to betterment work. The company has just received the first deliveries on an order for 5,000 new eighty-ton freight cars in expectation of a big crop movement this Fall.

Another prominent railroad man who reached New York yesterday for his first visit this year was no less enthusiastic over the Western situation. E. P. Ripley, President of the Atchison, reported that he had never seen crops that promised a better yield than the crops in the Southwest at this time.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Advices from Brazil received in the New York crude rubber market yesterday say that the important rubber States of that country will be represented at the New York Rubber Exhibition, which will be held in September. According to the report, permanently exhibited products have been ordered by the Governor of Para to be shipped from Paris to New York, together with several special exhibits.

G. F. Mitchell, the recently appointed Supervising Tea Examiner of the Treasury Department, is now in New York examining the methods employed by local Government tea Inspectors. Interviewed by telephone yesterday, Mr. Mitchell said that he will probably be in New York for the next three or four days, making Boston his next stop. Although unable in the short time he has been here to make a thorough examination of the testing methods used by the local Inspectors, Mr. Mitchell said that a limited examination had revealed nothing that violated the new inspection regulations of the department.

USING $20,000,000 ON STEEL PLANTS

BESSEMER STEEL GOING OUT

Much of the Appropriation to Go Into Open-Hearth Furnaces — Favorable Reports of Business.

Following the sale less than three months ago of $30,500,000 of bonds of two of its subsidiary companies for continuing improvements and working capital, the United States Steel Corporation has appropriated about $20,000,000 for improvements, largely for the purpose of superseding with open-hearth furnaces some of its Bessemer steel plants. The trade looks upon these provisions for expansion as highly significant in the face of the complaints of existing overcapacity.

The Iron Trade Review says that from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 will be devoted to modernizing and remodeling the Edgar Thomson Works of the Carnegie Steel Company at Braddock, Penn.; $6,000,000 for completing the plant of the Minnesota Steel Company at Duluth, along the lines originally planned, and $3,000,000 for a new slabbing mill and some miscellaneous finishing capacity at Gary.

It says the remodeling of the Edgar Thomson Works is significant of the declining demand for Bessemer steel and of Bessemer rails especially, and that reports of trade conditions in the industry continue favorable.

"There were no appropriations last year from net income for additional property and construction, and the final surplus for the year was only $4,665,494. The Iron Age speaks of the appropriations as "highly significant after months of complaint of overcapacity," and adds this comment on general conditions:

"Our report of pig iron production in May emphasizes again the present record rate of steel works operations. The pig iron total last month was 2,512,582 tons, or 81,051 tons a day, against 2,375,436 tons, or 79,181 tons a day, in April. The significance of the figures is in the fact that the steel company furnaces made 1,922,557 tons of pig iron last month, against their previous high record of 1,830,717 tons in April. Last month's total for steel works furnaces is thus 150,000 tons more than their high record in the well-remembered movement of 1909-10, namely, 1,773,201 tons in January, 1910.

"The merchant furnace output, after two months of decline, increased by 900 tons a day last month, but at 19,033 tons a day is still about one-third less than the average for the well-remembered six months of expansion ended April 1, 1910. Hence with a steel production we are still below the best record in pig iron production.

"The country is now producing pig iron, including charcoal iron, at the rate of 30,000,000 tons a year, the 247 coke and anthracite furnaces active June 1 having a daily capacity of 81,435 tons against 79,397 tons a day for 241 furnaces on May 1.

"By contrast with two months ago, the industry is not now discussing predictions of recession, but rather those factors in the situation which may work against further increase in output. Coke supply is admittedly one of these. There are also reminders every week from some quarter that the scarcity of common labor is a definite check upon the effort to meet the market's demand."

ALBANY'S FOOD BILL HIGH.

Probably Spending $8,000,000 a Year for Supplies, Says W. C. Osborn.

ALBANY, June 5.—The Marketing Committee of the New York State Food Investigating Commission concluded its inquiry into the market situation in this vicinity to-day. The next hearing of the committee will be held in Buffalo on June 13 and 14 and the week following hearings will be held in Syracuse and Rochester.

Testimony was taken relative to shipment and handling of produce and foodstuffs. Witnesses testified that a big saving was accomplished by stores which conducted a wholesale and retail business.

William Church Osborn, Chairman of the committee, addressed the weekly noonday meeting of the Albany Plan Association. "The people of Albany," said he, "are probably spending $8,000,000 a year for their food supplies. The rise in prices for these supplies in ten years has been so great that probably $4,000 these same supplies could have been bought for $7,000,000.

"The expenses of handling food supplies in Albany are not over half the expenses in New York.

"The prices of Western supplies have risen steadily for ten years, and the best judgment is that they will continue to rise. It would seem to be the part of wisdom for the people of Albany to take steps to stimulate the production of local supplies for the Albany market by affording facilities for the handling of their goods in town, and especially by providing such facilities for fixing prices by auction or otherwise, and taking care of surplus left over, that the farmers will find it to their advantage to increase the production."

ADMITS EVERGLADE DEALS.

J. O. Wright Tells of Outside Profits While Government Engineer.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—J. O. Wright told the House Committee, investigating the so-called Florida Everglades charges, to-day, about his private land deals in North Carolina while a drainage engineer in the Department of Agriculture.

Wright admitted that he accepted stock and negotiated with certain North Carolina land companies and the State of North Carolina without telling his superiors. He says he got $5,000 stock in the Albermarle Development Company from J. N. Wilkinson of Bellehaven, N. C., and in return drew up a plan of reclaiming the land, and placed $4,000 in stock.

Wilkinson came to him in Washington, Wright said, accompanied by Representative Small of North Carolina. After their conference he was offered $5,000, and Representative Small got $1,000 in stock for his legal services.

The State of North Carolina offered him $5,000 to sell Lake Mattamuskeet in the Dismal Swamp, he said. In this he got $1,250, of which his superiors knew nothing.

At Wilson, N. C., with Lawrence Brett, another employe of the department, Wright went into a drainage deal which he testified netted him $2,200 and Brett $9,000.

Representative Small told the committee his law firm was attorney for the Albermarle Development Company, and challenged Wright in his presence to make any suggestion of improper conduct on his part and Wright hastened to say that he had no charges to make and knew of nothing improper on the part of the Legislator.

HOLDING SEABOARD SHARES.

Plan Said to be to Turn Property Over to a Southern Group.

With the sale by the Cumberland Corporation, a holding company formed to look after investments in Seaboard Air Line and affiliated securities of $21,000,000 of common and preferred stock of the Seaboard Air Line negotiations have been entered into to keep the Seaboard holdings intact for the purpose, it was thought in financial circles yesterday, of turning control of the property over to a group of Southern capitalists eventually.

Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank; A. H. Wiggin, President of the Chase National, and S. Davies Warfield are to hold the shares as representatives of the purchasers, according to the present plan. With the stock released by the Cumberland Corporation, it is thought that the representatives of the new syndicate will have a controlling interest in the railroad company.

STOCKS OUT OF TOWN

While the markets in other cities were firmer yesterday in sympathy with the tone prevailing in New York, reports to THE NEW YORK TIMES showed very little increase in activity.

On the Baltimore Exchange yesterday the demand was slight, but there was no selling pressure. Houston Oil common was the only issue to show any life.

There was no special feature of interest in the Boston market. The coppers were all strong and most of them scored good sized advances. Chino went up to around 33, Ahmeek made another new high record at 350, Calumet and Arizona was up to 75½, Granby went up 1⅛ to 55½, Indiana was up ¾ at 20¼, Isle Royale sold up to 29⅝, Lake was up 1⅜ at 41¾, Quincy improved 2 points to 92, Shattuck Arizona was up a point at 22½, Superior moved up 1 to 35, Trinity was up 1½ at 8, and Wolverine was up a point at 111.

The shares of Peoples Gas led the Chicago market with an advance of 3 points. Sears-Roebuck common remained comparatively dull. Steel and Harvester common stocks followed New York and were higher. Small advances occurred also in the issues of Diamond Match, Booth Fisheries preferred, Can common, and Swifts. The latter were freely interchanged around 106. Canal and Dock, Union Carbide, and Boxboard were unchanged. The sale of a small lot of Commonwealth Edison at 138¾ attracted attention, that price being the lowest in several months. Shipbuilding common dropped 1½ points and Can preferred declined fractionally. Business in the bond department was well distributed in small lots and prices remained for the most part unchanged.

A somewhat firmer tone, which manifested itself chiefly in activity in Reading, was one of the features of the day's otherwise restricted trading on the Philadelphia Exchange. Taking the lead from the rise in New York, this stock rose steadily on active trading.

While there was no change in money rates in Philadelphia, some banks found it necessary to withdraw from the market for commercial paper to protect their reserves.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

A careful survey of the influences at work in yesterday's stock market hardly warranted the assumption which was accepted in some quarters, that the improvement in prices was due almost entirely to the operation of floor traders. The basis for the day's forward movement lay somewhat deeper than that, although some, at least, of the premises upon which higher prices were established were of a kind which later may call for a revision of the somewhat optimistic attitude which Wall Street, more than on any day recently, was inclined to adopt toward matters which lately were the cause of some concern. Politics was not openly discussed to any large extent yesterday, but there was quietly at work as an influence contributing to higher prices an extension of the view that after all there is little to be dreaded from the present political campaign, even if it should result in the nomination and election of the man who stands as the avowed leader of the radical ideas of the day. What Mr. Roosevelt may have to say in a speech he is to make within a few days would hardly be capable, it would seem, of altering the fundamental grounds upon which objections have been advanced against the campaign which he has been carrying on for a third term in the Presidency, but it remains true that a good deal of emphasis was being laid yesterday in responsible quarters upon what was understood to be the tenor of utterances shortly to be made by Mr. Roosevelt. However little the delivery of what Wall Street might choose to describe as a constructive speech might mean in the long run, such an expectation was effective yesterday in arousing a good deal of favorable stock market sentiment. It was undoubtedly one of the underlying influences upon which was built up the more active and decidely stronger market of yesterday afternoon. It was in the final hour of trading that the forward movement gained its greatest impetus. Closing at practically the highest prices of the day, the active stocks showed gains ranging up to 4 points or more. Reading led in activity, and showed a net gain of 4¼ points.

Passing over what may prove to be ephemeral elements in yesterday's favorable market influences, there is solid satisfaction to be taken in the latest news from the steel trade as well as in the continuance of the favorable conditions surrounding the growing crops. The first of this month, according to the figures compiled by The Iron Age, pig iron production was proceeding at an annual rate of 30,000,000 tons, which, if maintained for a twelvemonth, would exceed the highest previous annual production of pig iron by over 2,500,000 tons. Steadily the output of iron and steel has been mounting, until now the question of sufficient supplies of raw material, particularly of coke, has become a matter of serious discussion in the steel trade. The attention directed yesterday by the trade journals to the appropriations made by the United States Steel Corporation for new construction work, totaling about $20,000,000, and including a large sum for additions to the company's plants, helps to emphasize the pressure under which the steel mills of the country are now working. And yet, despite the heavy rate of output, unfilled orders have increased. The Iron Age being authority for the statement that those of the Steel Corporation were in round numbers 100,000 tons larger on June 1 than on May 1. Prices, it is true, are not high, but with an increase over recent low figures which assures reasonable profits to the large producers, particularly in view of the fact that the plants are being run practically at capacity, and with exports continuing to show increases, the present record of the steel trade is undoubtedly one of returning prosperity.

There has been more or less doubt regarding the validity of the assumption that the railroads during the last few years had been holding back orders for new material to such a large extent that inevitably the steel trade would benefit very greatly by the inflow of orders from the railroads when these could no longer postpone buying. The current volume of railroad orders would seem to confirm the accuracy of this assumption and to explain, at least in large part, the present very great activity of the steel industry. Nor does it appear that the active railroad demand for supplies as well as for new equipment has yet run its course. To some extent this lessens the accuracy of the present position of the steel trade as an index of the general volume of business and helps to explain the apparent discrepancy between the activity in that leading industry and the lesser volume of business in some other important lines.

Big Purchases of Atchison.

Large purchases of Atchison in the past few days were credited yesterday to a capitalist who is a Director in that road as well as in the Reading Company, whose stock held the most conspicuous place in yesterday's trading. It was recalled that Wall Street a few months ago was discussing with interest the prediction by this same capitalist that 1912 would witness great expansion in the steel trade, a prediction which has already come true.

Copper Stocks Pick Up.

Substantial advances in several of the copper stocks helped yesterday to lessen the point of the comment very common in street discussion that the copper shares were not profiting at all by the further advance in the price of the metal. The fact that Amalgamated and some other leading copper stocks were scarcely any, if at all, higher, with copper selling at 17 cents, than they were when the price of the metal was 3 cents lower, was one of the things which has helped to support the belief entertained in some quarters that the relatively high price of copper was not altogether the result of a natural movement.

Finances of English Railway Union.

While the general strike of railroad employes was underway in England last August, it was assumed that the union was selling its holdings of railroad stocks in order to supply itself with funds to carry on the strike. It appears now, from the report of the Society of Railway Servants, that as a matter of fact none of the union's holdings of railway stocks was disposed of. They all remained in the union's treasury, which apparently raised the funds needed last Summer by transferring some real estate mortgages which it held. The union's income for the year increased by over $90,000, owing to the enrollment of 41,363 additional members.

End of an Old Firm.

One of the oldest and best-known houses in Wall Street has passed out of existence, and its home has been demolished without attracting the slightest attention. The firm was Flynn & Co., dealers in red and yellow soda at 2 cents a glass, milkshake, candy, and cigarettes. In all of these necessities of the messenger boy trade the company did a thriving business, so that its head had visions of being able to retire soon to give all of his time to real estate which he had bought. His sudden death following an operation made it necessary to wind up the business, for the "Company" consisted of one very small boy. Moreover, J. P. Morgan & Co., on whose property at the corner of Wall and Broad Streets the little shop had stood for so many years, were not willing to accept a new tenant. The presence of the little candy stand pressed up against the entrance to the banking quarters was always something of a mystery. An old employe who claims to know has always declared that the use of the valuable corner, rent free, was J. P. Morgan's reward to an ignorant peddler who used to make it a practice to be on hand when the financier arrived at or departed from his office in order to open his carriage door. As the peddler prospered he dropped his unpronounceable Greek name and became known as Flynn.

Wall Street's Luncheon.

To most of the persons who earn a living in the financial district the harrowing tales of the suffering inflicted on the brokers and others by the waiters' strike is a good bit of imaginative humor. In no other section of the city is the number of waiters so small in proportion to the diners. Much less attention is paid to the noon-day meal in Wall Street than in the big wholesale and shopping centres. Owing to the short Stock Exchange day most men rarely sit down to a real luncheon. Instead they either have something sent in to their offices or rush to the nearest counter luncheon, where they spend about a quarter of an hour. Their thousands of employes, who have the time but not the money for a leisurely luncheon, usually frequent the buffet restaurants and act as their own waiters. Most of the men who make their daily luncheon hour an occasion to talk business go to the several downtown clubs.

T. R. and the Market.

When the results in Massachusetts and Ohio became known the traders who tell you what the market is going to do decided that the prospect of the Taft ship going on the rocks was serious. Now they hold that the Colonel, if elected, will go into office again determined to get approval of his administration by bringing on the greatest business boom in this country's history. A story on the Stock Exchange yesterday was that Mr. Roosevelt is now preparing a speech for delivery at Memphis which will be delivered for the principal purpose of reassuring the American business man. That kind of a speech would give Wall Street no end of comfort.

Spending to Save.

The management of the Chicago & Alton, which has just arranged for the sale of $4,500,000 of an authorized issue of $20,000,000 of 6 per cent. bonds, expects to invest the proceeds in such a way that the money will not only earn its own carrying charge, but that of previous expeditures, which are not bringing the desired returns. It is planned to use the $4,500,000 for new second-track and extensions to the terminal facilities at Chicago, Kansas City, and St. Louis, which will greatly increase the road's facilities for handling business all along the line. The Alton management ascribes the congestion which has occurred at these points as the reason for the excessively high operating costs, and it is believed that the addition of a second track, where needed, will enable the company to handle much more traffic with a relatively small increase in expenses.

Slump in Motors.

Among the unofficial transactions on the Curb yesterday sales of United States Motors resulted in a sharp break. The preferred stock, which, at its last sale on Friday, was at 27¾, opened at 20 and broke to 18. The common shares sold down to 5½. The company's year ends July 31. Last year's report showed net income of $1,569,266, out of which bond interest required $718,756 and preferred dividends $738,411. The preferred dividend has not been paid in 1912.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Braden Copper Becomes Unusually Active and Makes New High Record on Curb.

Interest in the Curb market yesterday centered in the burst of activity in Braden Copper, which, after opening at 6¾, rose to 7⅛. The close, after sales of 13,000, was at 6⅞, even with Tuesday's close. The other coppers were strong, but sluggish. British Columbia continued active, however, and sold 7,000 from 5⅞ up to 6⅛, closing at the high price.

In the industrial list there was an upward movement in Lehigh Valley Coal Sales, which rose from 243 to 250 and closed at the high level. United Cigar Stores sold 1,200 between 239½ and 242½ and closed at 241, one point above the opening. The bond list was more active than in any recent market, seven issues appearing in the trading. The Braden Copper bonds were active and the 6 per cents sold $80,000 at 140, with an odd lot going at 146. Other mining bonds were also active, but prices in these issues were stationary.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Prices on the Consolidated Stock Exchange were working into higher ground throughout the session. For the greater part of the time the market afforded good opportunities to buyers, ruling under the New York Stock Exchange range. Quotations for prominent stocks were sometimes ¼ to ⅜ of a point under the other board. The two markets, however, came closer together late in the day. The relative softness reflected both commission house profit taking on a large scale and a tendency on the part of many of the room traders to oppose the advance in prices. The rise in the hard coalers—Reading and Lehigh Valley—was accompanied by heavy dealings. The market as a whole was helped by favorable reports regarding the outlook for the crops.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Rockefeller Interests Sell 45th Street Plot to Syndicate for Twenty-story Structure — Heidelberg Building Passes Into New Ownership — Upper Broadway Corner Theatre Lease — Many Brooklyn Deals.

The Abeyton Realty Company, an organization controlled by John D. Rockefeller, and which acquired three years ago as a protection to the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, the three old dwellings at 7, 9, and 11 West Forty-fifth Street, immediately in the rear of the church, which faces Forty-sixth Street, has sold the Forty-fifth Street plot to a syndicate which, it is stated, contemplates the erection of a twenty-story office building. The new company is known as the Forty-fifth Street Realty Company, but the names of the principals have not been announced. The property was sold for the Rockefeller interests by Nichols & Hobbie who have represented Mr. Rockefeller in several recent transactions. The consideration was $250,000.

The Forty-fifth Street plot has a frontage of 45 feet by 100.5 deep, and adjoins the six-story commercial building on the northwest corner of Fifth Avenue and Forty-fifth Street. It was believed in realty circles that the sale of this protective plot means the sale of the old Fifth Avenue Church property in the near future. The plans for a new structure on the present site were abandoned some time ago, it being the belief of the leading officers that the location was no longer adapted to an expensive church building.

Starr J. Murphy is President of the Abeyton Realty Company and its officers are in the Standard Oil Building, 26 Broadway.

New Owners for Heidelberg Tower.

The Heidelberg building, occupying the small Forty-second street block front on the south side between Broadway and Seventh avenue, has passed into the control of a new company, it was ascertained yesterday, organized by Arthur G. Goldair and W. L. Wimmer, of St. Louis, Mo. The corporate name of the new owners is the Godair-Wimmer Building Company.

The new syndicate has bought out the interests of the old Lankershire Realty Company which took over the structure from the original building company in January, 1911. The new syndicate takes about nineteen years' leasehold of the original twenty-one years' lease taken from the Coe estate, the owners of the land, with renewal privileges.

The Heidelberg building, a seven-story structure with a tall blank tower which was intended to be used for advertising purposes, was finished in 1910. The advertising feature was a failure, resulting primarily in the various reorganizations of the controlling syndicates. Joseph H. Flieck, of Chicago, represented the Lankershire Company in the recent deal whereby the leasehold on the property was turned over to the Godair-Wimmer concern. Candler Cobb, of this city, was secretary of the Lankershire Company. A new agent has control of the building, and it was stated that the new owners intend in the near future to institute several important changes. It has been stated that when the occasion demanded it, the tower would be taken down and the building would be enlarged to a sixteen or twenty-story structure.

Upper Broadway Lease for Theatre.

A long lease has just been taken by the theatrical syndicate of which William Fox holds the controlling interest on the large plot at the southwest corner of Broadway and Ninety-seventh street, adjoining the northwest corner of Ninety-sixth street, leased over a year ago by the Fox theatrical interests from the Charles F. Hoffman estate and on which a large theatre was built a few months ago. The Ninety-seventh street corner, 100.11 on Broadway and 100 feet deep, is owned by Alphonse H. Alker, while the three adjoining vacant parcels, 25 feet each, on the south side of Ninety-seventh street are owned by James E. Ward. The entire corner, therefore, is 100.11 by 175 deep, and with the Ninety-sixth street corner gives the Fox syndicate control of the entire block front, 200.10 on Broadway by 200 feet on Ninety-sixth street.

The lease was taken by Gustavus A. Rogers, representing the theatre syndicate. The annual rent for the Ninety-sixth street corner is $27,500. While nothing definite was stated as to the immediate improvement of the Ninety-seventh street corner, it is understood that, owing to the success of the Ninety-sixth street amusement house, the plans of the lessees is to erect a similar building on the adjacent corner, with stores on the ground floor.

The three five-story flats at 103, 105, and 107 East Ninetieth Street, about eighty feet east of Park Avenue, have been sold by Emanuel Simon for Michael Cohen to John F. Sheridan for investment. The adjacent block front on the west side of West End Avenue, from Sixty-third to Sixty-fourth Street, was leased recently by Thomas F. THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—High barometric pressure in northern districts has been attended by cooler weather from New England to Montana, and temperatures are near the seasonal average in the Gulf and the South Atlantic States. Over the Southwest and on the Pacific slope temperatures continue above seasonal, and readings Wednesday were above 100 degrees in the interior of California and Arizona.

There have been scattered rains within the last 24 hours in the South Atlantic and Gulf States and the Upper Mississippi and Missouri Valleys. In all other parts of the country the weather continued fair.

The indications are that an area of local rains will be developed over the Middle West and move east over the Middle Mississippi and Ohio Valleys, reaching the Middle Atlantic States and New England Friday.

Temperatures will not change decidedly in any portion of the country during the next 48 hours.

Winds along the New England and the Middle Atlantic Coasts will be light to moderate, variable; South Atlantic Coast, light to moderate, east.

Steamships departing Thursday for European ports will have moderate variable winds and overcast weather to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND FRIDAY.

Eastern New York—Fair in south, unsettled, with somewhat warmer, in north portion Thursday; Friday probably showers; light variable winds.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Thursday and probably followed by showers late Thursday night or on Friday; light variable winds.

Southern New England—Fair Thursday; Friday probably showers; light to moderate variable winds.

Northern New England—Increasing cloudiness and slightly warmer Thursday; probably followed by showers Thursday night or Friday; light to moderate to variable winds.

3 A. M.	62	67	4 P. M.	58	74
9 A. M.	63	66	9 P. M.	56	67
12 M.	59	68	12 P. M.	56	68

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 68; for the corresponding date last year it was 60; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 66.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 63; at 8 P. M. it was 68. Maximum temperature, 74 degrees at 3 P. M.; minimum, 62 degrees at 5 A. M. Humidity, 54 per cent. at 8 A. M; 29 per cent. at 8 P. M.

EDUCATION NOTES.

The Morris High School Musical Societies, conducted by Edwin S. Tracy, will give a concert in the school auditorium on the evening of June 14.

The Interborough Women Teachers' Association issued a circular yesterday to all members whose salary under the equal pay law has not yet been satisfactorily adjusted." The following advice is given:

"First—Sign every payroll 'Receipted under protest,' or 'Accepted without detriment to further claim.'

"Second—If you have not done this continuously since January, 1912, send registered letter to Controller William A. Prendergast and Auditor H. R. M. Cook, making similar protest as to salary received since Jan. 1, 1912.

"N. B.—To make protection of your rights doubly sure it would not be unwise for all to follow advice in 'second' above.

"GRACE C. STRACHAN, President.
"ISABEL A. ENNIS, Secretary."

Sixty members of the Junior Alumni Association of Public School 40, Manhattan, attended its recent dinner. Dr. Joseph K. Van Denburg, Principal of the school, welcomed the "boys," and District Supt. Albert Shiels, a former Principal of the school, assured the alumni of his continued interest in their success.

The "safe and sane" public school celebration of the Fourth of July will be held in 200 of the schools, beginning at 10:30 A. M. and ending at noon. The buildings will be decorated with flags. One hundred silver and 100 bronze medals will be presented to the pupils of the vacation schools and playgrounds who write the best compositions on some subject relating to the celebration.

One hundred thousand illuminated copies of the preamble of the Constitution of the United States will be distributed. Each copy will have a picture of James Duane, the first Mayor of New York under its new charter, after the evacuation of the British in 1783, and a picture of Mayor Gaynor. Principals have been asked to include in the day's exercises the salute to the flag, the reading of Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg address, and parts of the Declaration of Independence.

The special committee of the Board of Education which is conducting an examination into the methods of the Board of Examiners will probably hold its final hearing on next Tuesday evening. At the hearing last Tuesday evening Chairman Abraham Stern, in the course of questioning George J. Smith, one of the Board of Examiners, as to the language examinations by that body, was informed by the witness that Walter L. Hervey was the language expert of the Board of Examiners, but that he himself was qualified to conduct the language examinations. Chairman Stern caused laughter by asking Mr. Smith if he and Mr. Hervey could understand each other. Mr. Smith said they could, and that he could detect faulty accent in German. Mr. Stern asked him to give a sentence in German, but Mr. Smith replied that he could not do so fluently. "But you are nevertheless positive you can detect defective German accent?" said Mr. Stern.

"I am," replied Mr. Smith.

City.

The Municipal Civil Service Commission has approved the following:

Communication from Chief Examiner Ireland, recommending that the application of Herbert S. Whiting, for assistant electrical engineer, be accepted. He has taken a residence in the Borough of Manhattan.

Letter from the Chief Examiner, reporting the resignation of C. C. Barbee, Monitor.

Letter from the Chief Examiner, stating that the examination for promotion to third and fourth grade inspector of illumination, Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, held on May 13, 1912, was completed on June 1, 1912.

Report of Chief Examiner on the requisition of the President of the Borough of Richmond, for a list from which to appoint a clerk, with stenographic ability. Mr. Ireland reports that there is a preferred list of clerk in existence, also a competitive list of stenographer and typewriter, third grade, which might properly be certified.

Letter from the Chief Examiner, recommending, with reference to the requisition of the Department of Correction for a list for instructor of printing, that the list of inspector with a knowledge of printing be certified.

Letter from the Chief Examiner, suggesting that in the coming examination for deputy medical superintendent, Hospital and Farm Colony, that the requirements of residence in the State of New York, and of vouchers resident in the city of New York be waived.

Report of the Chief Examiner, on the question of transfers from the Board of Water Supply to other city departments. Mr. Ireland states that, in his opinion, the question arises only with reference to positions in the engineering service, and that the examinations are of an equivalent character, but that the candidates took the examinations under expressed and well understood conditions; first, that no certification should be made to other city departments, and, second, that no transfers would be allowed. He states that there are lists in existence for axeman, rodman, and transitman for general certification, and it is his opinion that all such transfers should be denied.

Letter from Mr. Ihlseng, Examiner, with reference to his absence on June 4 and 5.

Report of Dr. Rene, Examiner, stating that, in his opinion, the examination for hospital physician, fourth grade, held April 27, 1903, in which Dr. Joseph Weinberg had a rating of 91 per cent., was of such a character as to qualify him for the position of medical examiner in the Street Cleaning Department.

Report of Mr. Murray, recommending that Paul A. Cuenin and Domenick Greigo, candidates in the examination for promotion to assistant dump inspector in the Department of Street Cleaning be disqualified, both men having admitted that the applications were not made out in their own handwriting. This requirement is printed at the top of the application blank.

POLICE TO USE GUNS ON WARRING GANGS

QUICKLY GET CHICK TRIGGER

Armed with a Big Revolver He Was Prepared for Attack—Zelig Shot for Deserting to Rival Gang.

With no less than six gang fights breaking out in various parts of the city in the ten hours ending at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, and an ominous brooding and whispers that some one was "going to get his" before daybreak to-day, Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty last night realized the seriousness of the situation confronting the police, and sent out between 50 and 100 of his best detectives to watch for trouble at all danger points. That the lawlessness defying them was of no ordinary sort was made evident by one high police official, who, when asked last evening whether the old-time nightstick laid across the gangsters' heads might not prove efficacious in restoring law and order, replied:

"I wouldn't use a nightstick. If I saw one of these gun men preparing to draw I'd use a gun. I don't know whether my men are as good shots as I am, but I hope so."

The detectives sent out last night had orders to gather in all the gangsters they could on one charge or another, preferably the easiest and generally unrefutable charge of carrying concealed deadly weapons. Detectives Gamberdella, Guarneri, and Devoti took to the Mulberry Street Station as the first prisoner of the sort, Frank Tricker, familiarly known as "Chick" Tricker, or, more eloquently, as "Chick Trigger," a saloonkeeper of 241 Bowery.

On Tuesday evening, as "Chick" was standing in front of his saloon, three taxicabs drove past, and from them a fusillade of lead popped forth at him. He hopped indoors and escaped unscathed. That meant, the police concluded, that "Chick" would be heard from soon. The three detectives watched his place from a building opposite all day, but "Chick" did not appear.

Mr. Trigger Enters a Protest.

Last night, however, they saw him enter the saloon, and swooped down upon the place almost immediately. Inside, standing behind the bar far in the rear of the saloon, they saw "Chick," chatting with a customer over the bar. They "frisked" him for concealed weapons, but there was no need of that; for, protruding from his waistband, and within easy reach of "Chick Trigger's" trigger finger, they say they saw a big loaded revolver.

"You'll have to come along with us," said Gamberdella.

"Say, fellows," replied "Chick," "that ain't square. I guess I've got a right to carry a gun here in my own place. My life's in danger."

Regardless, however, of the mitigating circumstances that "Chick" was carrying his artillery in his own home, the detectives took him along, for the greater peace and quiet of the metropolis. The orders from Headquarters, it was said, were to gather in all gang men on general principles, "for the public safety."

Among the places kept under police surveillance last night were the Chatham Club of 6 and 8 Doyers Street; Jimmy Kelly's Mandarin Café on the same street, "Big Jack" Sirocco's place at 12 Chatham Square, "Chick" Trigger's emporium at 241 Bowery, and three saloons where the Fourteenth Street Gang is wont to congregate, on Fourteenth Street, near Second Avenue.

It was admitted at Police Headquarters yesterday that even the initial step of identifying the different suspected gangsters with their proper gangs and ascertaining the relations of the various gangs to arrive at motives for the various shootings had not been worked out. The week's eruptions of bullet and bomb fights, it was believed, might be traced not to two but to three or four or even five separate gangs. Deputy Commissioner Dougherty said that some of his best men are now going over the history of all the suspected gangsters and gangs, in an effort to find motives and prove complicity in the recent shootings.

"I am going to break up this gang warfare," he said. "I am taking a personal interest in the cases, and have received valuable information from certain sources. I hope to show results in a few days."

At present, however, the Deputy Commissioner is unable to explain the gang outbreaks in any other way than to lay them to the doors of various gang leaders because of "business rivalry."

How the Feud Began.

Shortly before Deputy Commissioner Dougherty left Police Headquarters yesterday afternoon he had before him Jack Sirroco and "Chick" Tricker, leaders of one faction in the present gang war, and Jimmy Kelly, leader of the other, each of whom he questioned concerning the motives for the present warfare and their plans for the future. It is understood that they one and all replied substantially to this effect:

"The fight has been brought down into Chinatown from above Fourteenth Street, and we've been forced into it. It's a fight to the finish, and there's nothing left for us to do but to defend ourselves."

According to one person who has long been conversant with the situation brought about by the various gangs in the lower east side, Deputy Commissioner Dougherty's statement that there is at the bottom of the trouble only acute business competition, is, in a very real sense, true. Jimmy Kelly, according to this man, has long enjoyed the reputation of being in with the powers, political and otherwise, that control at Police Headquarters, and as enjoying gambling concessions and carte blance in revelry in the dives of Chinatown—so much so, according to this authority, that it is told throughout the district that when, on Tuesday night, he police closed up all the dives there, the Chatham Club and Sirrocco's place remained closed and deserted with a police guard in front of them, while Kelly's, though ostensibly closed with the rest, held great merriment behind drawn blinds.

Kelly, said this man, obtained his reputed pull with the powers by turning in the old days against Sirrocco and "squealing" to the police concerning him. He manifested his power in many ways. A favorite diversion of the Kelly gang, it is said, was to catch a suspected hanger-on of the Sirrocco crowd, throw him into the street with a cracked skull and blackened eyes, and then help the police find him, with inevitably a revolver or blackjack which the rival gangsters had "planted" in his pocket. Louis Poggi, known as Louie the Lump, who is now a fugitive from justice, is said to have rendered valiant service to Kelly in this way.

All this successful monopoly in the business of Chinatown, said the man familiar with conditions there, brought on a deadly hatred against Kelly on the part of Big Jack Sirrocco and "Chick" Tricker, who, with "Big Jack" Porgi, has a part interest in Sirrocco's place at 12 Chatham Square. Kelly became a marked man, and could never move around without a heavy bodyguard.

Two Early Morning Encounters.

Early yesterday morning, Dick Curley, a prize fight promoter, said to live at the Hotel Albany, with east side headquarters in the Bridge Cafe, at Delancey Street and the Bowery, was fired upon as he entered Cushman's cafe at 147 Third Avenue, by a gang of five men, who escaped in an automobile. He could recall nothing more about the car later except that it was a big, dark one, and that it had disappeared up Third Avenue, turning into Sixteenth Street. The number could not be recognized, the gang having apparently obscured that by coating the number plate with oil and allowing the dust to gather upon it.

The second shooting occurred an hour later at Second Avenue and Ninth Street. When Policemen Pyle and Ryan reached the scene they found two men lying in the street. One said he was Antonio Angerzio, a news clerk, of 438 West Thirty-fifth Street; the other, Charles Lewis, a salesman, of 161 Manhattan Avenue. Each nursed a bullet-peppered leg. The policemen saw three men running northward on the avenue and gave chase, capturing them at Tenth Street.

Freed in Court, But Caught Again.

The prisoners said they were Frank Hart of 181 De Graw Street, Brooklyn; Albert Leonardo of 177 Fifteenth Street, Brooklyn, and James Martello of 168 Elizabeth Street. All were charged with felonious assault. Martello, according to the police, was arrested in the gun fight early Monday morning in Chinatown, but released in court. The policemen declared they had seen two of the prisoners toss away revolvers just before they were caught. Magistrate Appleton in the Essex Market Court held them without bail for trial to-day. Lewis and Angerzio were held as material witnesses. The police thought yesterday that one of the two is known also as Ike Schnear and a friend of "Big Jack" Zelig.

Another man whom the police are holding as a material witness in this case was a bystander, Jacob Lazarus of 74 Second Avenue. He said that he and Lewis were walking along Second Avenue when they noticed a gang of roughs behind them. Almost at the same time a larger gang appeared in front of them and opened fire. The gang behind returned the fire. Lazarus darted out of the firing line, but Lewis was caught in the fire between the gangs, and fell. Then the two gangs scattered and fled.

at Tenth Street the police found three revolvers. One still contained one loaded cartridge and four empty shells. Four cartridges had been fired from each of the other revolvers, while two loaded shells still remained. The number on one of the revolvers had been carefully filed off.

Later in the day the police presented before Magistrate Kernochan in the Tombs Court Charles Torti, who, with Louis Bull and Victor Morino, was arrested at the time of the shooting of "Big Jack" Zelig on Monday morning. At that time Zelig was leaving the Criminal Court Building in $1,000 bail after his arrest for taking part in shooting up the saloon of Jake Poggi, brother of Louie the Lump, earlier in the day.

Detective Oliver, who arrested Torti, testified that from the steps of the Criminal Court Building he saw Torti fire three shots in the direction of "Big Jack" and threw away his revolver immediately after the shooting. "Big Jack," who had just entered 116 Centre Street, fell with a bullet wound in his neck. Then, according to Oliver, Torti tossed his revolver into the hallway of the building. Oliver rushed over and arrested him, but not until he had shoved aside Bull and Morino, who, he said, jostled him and tried to explain that he had arrested the wrong man.

Magistrate Kernochan said that there was not sufficient evidence to hold Bull and Morino on the charge of felonious assault, but directed that the charge be withdrawn and charges of disorderly conduct entered against the two. Thereupon he held them on those charges for sentence to-day. He held Torti without bail. "Big Jack" Zelig is still in a critical condition at Bellevue Hospital.

PHYSICIANS APPROVE NEW CODE OF ETHICS

A BLOW AT THE CURE ALLS

Medical Association Joins in Movement to Cut Down Industrial Diseases.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 5.—Among the thousands of members of the medical profession who are attending the annual session of the American Medical Association, widespread satisfaction exists at the action of the House of Delegates in adopting the proposed revision of principles of medical ethics.

While the new rules govern a physician's conduct toward his patient, toward other physicians and the profession at large, and regulate professional services of doctors to each other, duties in consultations, compensation, &c., there is nothing in the rules that will embarrass members of the American Medical Association, since one of the qualifications for membership is a high standard of honor in medical practice.

But the new code of ethics, while not affecting the membership of the American Medical Association, strikes a blow at those manufacturers of quack nostrums and cure-alls who catch the dollars of the American public while working under the name of some supposedly reputable physician. The new code expressly states:

It is unprofessional to promise radical cures; to boast of cures and secret methods of treatment or remedies; to exhibit certificates of skill or of success in the treatment of diseases, or to employ any methods to gain the attention of the public for the purpose of obtaining patients.

It is unprofessional, for personal profit, to hold patients for surgical instruments or medicines; to accept rebates on prescriptions or surgical appliances or perquisites from attendants who aid in the care of patients.

It is unprofessional for a physician to assist unqualified persons to evade legal restrictions governing the practice of medicine; it is equally unethical to prescribe or dispense secret medicines or other secret remedial agents or manufacture or promote their use in any way.

"We desire to have the public know that it is not physicians, but men who have no connection with the medical profession, who are manufacturing these cure-alls," said Dr. Frederick Green of Chicago. "The ethics of our profession forbid the advertisement of statements known to be untrue, and that is what these quack medicine manufacturers deliberately do. Every physician knows that no medicine exists that has the efficacy claimed for these patented nostrums.

"We have a mass of evidence at our headquarters in Chicago to show that these medicine manufacturers hire some broken down member of the medical profession, paying him in many cases less than $40 per month for the use of his name. They have failed in their profession, and as a last resort yield to the alluring whisper of the unprincipled manufacturer, who is invariably a man who knows nothing about medicine and therefore needs the use of a physician's name."

The greatest movement the world has ever known toward saving the workers of a country from disease and death from dangerous occupations was started toward assured success this morning by coalition of the Public Health Department of the American Medical Association and the American Association for Labor Legislation, started last year in Chicago.

Headed by Surgeon General Rupert Blue of the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, and President of the Section, and Prof. Henry R. Seager, head of the Association of Labor Legislation, the combined meeting started action on what is intended to be a nation-wide crusade to spare the worker.

College professors, workers in the several big foundations established by social workers and heads of State departments of business health and labor, have joined the movement which has started its work with a demand on the United States Government for more exact collection of information regarding the dangers of occupations, and which intends to demand Federal and State legislation to lessen the danger insurred by workers.

Factory owners and social workers are to be asked to furnish information regarding the dangers.

"The social worker learns all conditions," said Dr. Oetheimer in speaking of the plan. "She knows the number of families in the house, their work, their illnesses, the cleanliness or filth of the home. She arranges for care of women about to become mothers, makes daily or weekly visits, sends some to hospitals or dispensaries, others to seashore or sanitariums, gets work for some, food, money and care for others from suitable charities. With the aid of such trained social workers, instructing women in their own homes and acting as the link between homes and hospital, we believe that we have managed to save many lives, much contagion, illness, worry and expense."

Along somewhat similar lines was the paper on "The Relation of the Infant Welfare Movement to Pediatrics," which was read by Dr. Thomas B. Cooley of Detroit. He declared that the greatest opportunity to reduce infant mortality "has been shown to lie in educating the public, the mothers, and young girls in infant feeding and hygiene."
